Bartlett has now entered into our language, itself a "familiar quotation." From its first appearance as Familiar Quotations: A Collection of Passages, Phrases and Proverbs Traced to Their Sources in Ancient and Modern Literature, published privately by John Bartlett in 1855, to the present Fourteenth Edition, this indispensable reference work has become the standard source for what is enduring in language and literature, and the final arbiter of the often asked question, "Who said that?"

In the Fourteenth Edition, this classic work has been completely revised and updated. Under the general editorship of Emily Morison Beck, a staff of outstanding scholars has provided an expert review of the text, culling out the no longer familiar and making numerous additions. With the help of the latest computer technology, a greatly enlarged index has been prepared.

The result is a Bartlett that perpetuates the imposing standards of previous editions and is at the same time relevant to the de-

Preface

TO THE FOURTEENTH EDITION

"BARTLETT" has now entered into our language, itself a "familiar quotation," not associated with either pears or trees, but a source book nearly as indispensable as the dictionary: "Look it up in Bartlett!" Sir Winston Churchill thought it an "admirable work" and studied it intently, he tells us in My Early Life. "The quotations when engraved upon the memory give you good thoughts. They also make you anxious to read the authors and look for more." Readers and editors of Bartlett have done just this—and found more. In more than a century of life Bartlett has grown prodigiously and its sales increase steadily each year. So, why now a new edition?

The most obvious reason, of course, is the number of quotations that have become memorable since the last edition in 1955. Historical events, the growth of philosophy and science, the eminence of certain statesmen, writers, poets, and others who use words effectively, strongly influence our use of language and choice of expressions. An appendix to Bartlett might have taken care of these addenda; this had been done in some earlier editions. But today there are important additional reasons for a thorough revision—if, like a dictionary, this collection of historical and living sayings is to keep abreast of the times.

Literary tastes and popular expressions change from one generation to another, and the facility of communication has accelerated this process. Figures of the past emerge from the shadow of neglect and begin to be quoted; others fade from fashion, or their words lose their relevance to the times. Fads create catchy phrases, some of them lasting. And all the while there is an accretion of sayings which, one supposes, will provide a ballast for civilization for as long as men continue to communicate with one another.

As the two postwar editions of Bartlett, the twelfth and thirteenth, record the advent of the atomic age, so the fourteenth bears the particular imprint of the last decade. Since the publication of the last edition, a large number of world-renowned figures now "belong to the ages," leaving their mark upon our culture—men like Churchill, Kennedy, Adlai Stevenson, Pope John XXIII, Nehru, Oppenheimer, Hammarskjöld, Albert Schweitzer; distinguished men of letters like Robert Frost, Hemingway, T. S. Eliot, Faulkner, Aldous Huxley, E. E. Cummings, Roethke, Pasternak, Thurber, Carl Sandburg, Camus. It is interesting to speculate, furthermore, whether this edition that bears their death dates for the first time will carry more of their quotations than will future editions, affected as they will be by historical perspective.

Some phenomena of recent years are crystallized in a word or phrase: beat generation, brinkmanship, the Great Society, the affluent society, the multiversity, cybernetics, racism, the revolution of rising expectations, the American Establishment, poverty—the other America.

The nature and the size of the Bartlett audience provide another reason for a new edition. The vastly increased number of students, the expanding interests of the intellectually curious, as evidenced by the tremendous variety of paperbacks and inexpensive editions on every subject, demand a broader reach into other fields of literature and an amplification of authors hitherto inadequately represented.

Outdated translation is another reason for revision. The classics for the most part have been heretofore represented by translations unchanged since the nineteenth century, some of them clearly archaic. Until now Homer has appeared in Pope's translation, of which even his contemporary, the classicist Richard Bentley, remarked, "It is a pretty poem, Mr. Pope, but you must not call it Homer." True enough; those "familiar quotations" like "Welcome the coming, speed the parting guest" are more Pope than Homer. They now appear appropriately under Pope, while well-known Homeric lines, like "All strangers and beggars are from Zeus, and a gift, though small, is precious," are here included for the first time.

As our range of reference expands inversely with the shrinkage of space on this earth, expressions and sayings from the cultures and literatures of Asia, Europe and South America are assimilated into our common heritage. Increasing interest in science, and the recognition that Freud, for example, in Auden's phrase is now "a whole climate of opinion," insist on greater representation from scientists and psychiatrists.

A number of figures besides Freud and Jung have never appeared in Bartlett before, perhaps because they were not thought to have said anything actually "familiar," or perhaps because they have not occurred to the editors as natural sources of quotations. But it was astonishing to find among the missing Confucius, Columbus, Chekhov, Bolívar, Brandeis, Bergson, Sir Thomas Malory, Cotton Mather, John Marshall, Pushkin, Flaubert, Gandhi, Lao Tzu, Kant, Kierkegaard. . . . Other important figures like St. Augustine or Julius Caesar formerly were credited with a single quote, not necessarily the most famous one.

An amazing number of famous quotations have been overlooked in previous editions. Here are a few: Man is the measure of all things (Protagoras); The greatest reverence is due the young (Juvenal); There is always something new out of Africa (Pliny); But it does move (Galileo); There go the ships (Psalm 104); When I am dead and opened, you shall find "Calais" lying in my heart (Mary Tudor); But that was in another country; and besides, the wench is dead (Marlowe); One man with courage makes a majority (Andrew Jackson); Surprised by joy (Wordsworth); Not Angles, but angels (Gregory I); Praise the sea, on shore remain (John Florio); $E = mc^2$ (Einstein); Q.E.D. (Euclid); War is much too serious a matter to be entrusted to the military (Clemenceau); Hypocrite lecteur—mon semblable—mon frère (Baudelaire); A journey of a thousand miles must begin with a single step (Lao Tzu); I beseech you, in the bowels of Christ, think it possible you may be mistaken (Cromwell), a saying which Judge Learned Hand would like to have "written over the portals of every church, every school, every courthouse, and . . . of every legislative body in the United States."

Errors persist—one for over a hundred years: the misquotation of the title of Gray's Elegy in omitting the word Written before in a Country Churchyard.

The inescapable conclusion is that a collection of this kind must be thoroughly overhauled from time to time. Today a single editor, or a brace of editors, is no longer adequate for what to John Bartlett in 1891 was still "this very agreeable pursuit." It is one thing to carry on the tradition of "familiar" and "worthy of perpetuation," to recognize in the sifting of hoary sayings the line that still persists as vital or pertinent. But to assume authority on the well-known quotations in all the fields and among all the authors now represented in this edition would be presumptuous. Thus, for the first time, the editor of Familiar Quotations has had a staff of consulting scholars who have spent many hours helping to compile well-known material from the classics, from Chinese, Japanese, Sanskrit, Russian, German, French, and Spanish sources, from Latin America, and from the sciences, psychology, medicine, American history, political science, American and English literature. They have also scanned the existing text for errors, and recommended what to eliminate as "dead wood" or no longer relevant. At least a fourth of these experts are under thirty, to give proper representation to the younger generation.

The editor of the fourteenth edition gratefully acknowledges the contributions of the following: Elizabeth Perkins Aldrich, Peter Anastas, George Basalla, William J. Courtenay, Bernard De Voto (for Mark Twain in the thirteenth and fourteenth editions), Admiral E. M. Eller USN, Dudley Fitts, Arthur Freeman, Paul Freund, Richard Gomrich, Stanley Kunitz, Elena Levin, Louis Lyons, David McCord, Robert Minshall, Samuel Eliot Morison, Henry A. Murray, Gregory Rabassa, John Paul Russo, Alain Seznec, Zeph Stewart, Maurice B. Strauss, M.D., John L. Sweeney, Prescott B. Wintersteen, Jr., Philip Young.

In addition to the countless friends and the faithful readers of Bartlett who write in to point out errors and omissions, the following are to be especially thanked for help and advice: Judge Bailey Aldrich, Catharine Cooper, John Kenneth Galbraith, Donald Gallup, Seymour Harris, James Laughlin, Robert Lescher, Henry F. Pommer, Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., Robert Sussman, Michael des Tombe, Alexander Williams, the Reverend Prescott B. Wintersteen, D.D.

It is impossible to exaggerate what the thirteenth and fourteenth editions of Familiar Quotations owe to Mary Rackliffe, head of the copyediting department at Little, Brown and Company. Her mastery of complex styling problems is matched by her exceptional memory and ear for the elusive line. In judgment and taste she is without peer. Moreover, she is responsible for the index, which is the largest and most thorough that Bartlett has ever had.

"We come too late to say anything which has not been said already," observed La Bruyère in 1688. But anyone looking at the quotations after that date will know that there will always be new ways to bring home old truths. "Poetry reminds man of his limitations . . . of the richness and diversity of his existence," John F. Kennedy remarked. It has always been evident too that, as he said, "Art establishes the basic human truths which must serve as the touchstone of our judgment." The great lines and passages from the ancients make us recognize, with reassurance—or resignation—how little man changes down the ages. Seneca, in the first century, could be speaking of us at this very hour when he writes, "We are mad, not only individually, but nationally. We check manslaughter and isolated murders; but what of war and the much vaunted crime of slaughtering whole peoples?" We can take comfort from Solon in the sixth century B.C.—"I grow old ever learning many things."

Books "are the voices of the distant and the dead," William Ellery Channing tells us, "and make us heirs of the spiritual life of past ages." Quotations, like books, "are true levelers. They give to all, who will faithfully use them, the society, the spiritual presence, of the best and greatest of our race."

Bartlett provides a distillation of this heritage, a guide to the manifold ways in which man has tried to express the basic human truths.

Historical Note

THE University Book Store in Cambridge, Massachusetts, was college for John Bartlett. He went to work there at the age of sixteen after attending the Plymouth public schools, and in 1849 when he was twenty-nine he bought the store. It had become a meeting place for book-loving Harvard professors and students, and through them developed John Bartlett's reputation for knowing a quotation, author and source. From his commonplace book of the most popular passages evolved Familiar Quotations, which he published himself and had printed in an edition of a thousand copies by the "printers to the university" in 1855.

It was a modest brown paperbound volume of two hundred and fifty-eight pages, representing a hundred and sixty-nine authors, many by a single quotation or, like his friend James Russell Lowell, by two. The Bible and Shakespeare took up about a third of the book; the balance was chiefly English poetry—Milton, Pope, Byron, and Wordsworth claiming the greatest number of entries. There was a small selection of prose from Milton, Bacon, Ben Franklin, Tom Paine, Macaulay, and one maxim from La Rochefoucauld, "Hypocrisy is the homage that vice pays to virtue." No Chaucer, Blake, Shelley, nor several other authors who could not have been much upon the tongue in the mid-nineteenth century. A mere handful of Americans were included: Longfellow, Irving, Bryant, Lowell, and a line each from "Hail Columbia," "The Star-Spangled Banner," and "The Old Oaken Bucket." People then, it seems, were not given to quoting Washington, Adams, Jefferson, Patrick Henry, Daniel Webster, or even Emerson (who made Bartlett by the third edition in 1858).

The Gettysburg Address had not yet been delivered. Walt Whitman published Leaves of Grass that same year, and Thoreau Walden the year before. Both writers were so in advance of their time, it seems, that neither was to be included in Familiar Quotations until the tenth edition in 1914, nine years after Bartlett's death.

The little book, one of the earliest collections of quotations, was a success, and in 1863 Little, Brown and Company became the publisher of the fourth edition. John Bartlett joined the firm that same year, becoming senior partner fifteen years later. He continued to edit Familiar Quotations until his death at the age of eighty-five in 1905, having also published The Shakespeare Phrase Book, a Catalogue of Books on Angling, and a Complete Concordance to Shakespeare's Dramatic Works and Poems.

In 1914 Nathan Haskell Dole, poet, editor, and translator from the French and Russian, edited the tenth edition, now grown twice the size and three times the thickness of the first. Dole's purpose, as he put it, was "to incorporate in the work quotations from those writers whose place in literature has been achieved since the issue of the ninth edition in 1891," and to add selections from other "best writers of their day." His criterion was that passages should have "the seal of popular approval" and be "distinctly worthy of perpetuation." He paid respectful homage to John Bartlett's "impeccable judgment," declaring, "It is not always easy for Elisha to wear the mantle of Elijah; but it is Elisha's business to carry on his predecessor's work in the same spirit."

Either because of contemporary tastes in literature or oversight, there were some rather surprising omissions in the tenth edition. No Blake, Pindar, Hawthorne, William or Henry James, or Emily Dickinson, to pick at random, but William Butler Yeats made it with, oddly enough, the one poem he himself refused to include in his Collected Poems, "The Land of Heart's Desire." There was a large section of "miscellaneous, translations, appendix," and the Bible, for some reason, now appeared at the end of the book. In the present edition it has been restored once more to the front, a fitting opening to quotations from our Judaeo-Christian culture.

No new edition appeared until 1937, a few years after Dole's death. Elijah's mantle passed to Christopher Morley, author, poet, editor, dubbed an "angloliterophile" for his love of the English language for its own sake. Louella D. Everett joined forces as associate editor.

Morley's preface to the eleventh edition is a lively essay which at the outset asks the question which every Bartlett editor, we feel, must try to answer: "What makes words memorable?" His broad literary background made him an ideal editor, and Miss Everett's ear for the popular line or verse gave that edition a more topical quality than the book had had hitherto.

For the first time the editors weeded out quotations no longer in currency. Some of the quaintest lines by Miss Fannie Steers, Sir Samuel Tuke, and Captain Charles Morris ("Solid men of Boston, make no long orations; Solid men of Boston, drink no deep potatoes") had seen their day. The flowery descriptive verse and the sugary sentiments of the last half of the nineteenth century were sharply cut, though a great deal still remained. Furthermore, Miss Everett combed over the favorite poetry of the Nineties, and added such versifiers as Mary Artemisia Lathbury, "the Chataqua Laureate"; and Julia Moore, "the Sweet Singer of Michigan," of whom Mark Twain wrote: "The one and unfailing great quality which distinguishes her poetry from Shakespeare's and makes it precious to us is its stern and simple irrelevancy." They still persevere into this edition of the 1960's.

Morley not only added to the twentieth-century quotations, he culled every period from ancient times on, reflecting perhaps a broadening cultural outlook on the part of the average American. The chronological order of authors remained, but otherwise the change in the eleventh edition was more striking than in any other, and the innovation of the two-column page allowed a vast increment of new quotations within a single volume.

Morley's theory of selection was broader than John Bartlett's. "Previous editions adhered, almost with pedantry, to the touchstone of familiarity," he wrote. "Only phrases or quotations that had gained wide recognition, become hypodermic, were admitted. . . . In the matter of new inclusions this edition is not so stringent: we have tried to make literary power the criterion rather than width and vulgarity of fame."

"Literary power" is so much more a matter of personal opinion than "familiarity" that this new approach opened up for future Bartlett editors the temptation to exploit their literary passions. Restraint has

Footnotes and Cross-References

When the quotation is a translation the original language if familiar in itself appears in a footnote. For example, "The people are a many-headed beast," from Horace, on page 123a, has a footnote quoting the Latin, with cross-references to variations, and examples of derivative versions.

In cases where the familiar quotation differs from the original whence it derives, as in the case of the Latin mottoes of the Great Seal of the United States from Virgil, footnotes (on pages 116b, 117a, and 119b) provide full information. The footnotes also cross-reference. For example, a quotation from Horace's Epode XIV has a footnote cross-referring to Keats's Ode to a Nightingale, which it inspired. Under Keats we find a footnote to the Ode which cross-refers back to Horace.

Suppose you wish to find out who first used the expression "iron curtain." You look up either "iron" or "curtain" in the index, which sends you to page 924b. Here, under Churchill, you find the quotation that made the expression famous, in his speech at Fulton, Missouri, on March 5, 1946, together with a lengthy footnote which relates the other ways people used it before he did.

Franklin D. Roosevelt is usually credited with having first expressed the idea that "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself." Both the index and the footnote for the Roosevelt quotation indicate its derivation from earlier writers, some in languages other than English.

Index of Authors (page 1107)

Authors are listed alphabetically with their birth and death dates. Page numbers are given for both the author's main entry and for his quotations in footnotes throughout the text.

In this edition we have continued and expanded the Bartlett tradition of thorough indexing of the quotations. The result is voluminous—more than 117,000 entries.

This thoroughness is aimed first of all at facilitating the location of remembered or half-remembered or almost forgotten or topical

("Let's see what Bartlett has about morning") quotations. The index plays another role as a browsing book of unusual proportions. The pursuit of an evocative index entry noticed almost at random may lead to renewed pleasures or to the discovery of hitherto unsuspected sources of illumination and enjoyment.

Keep the following in mind when using the index:

(1) Spelling follows American (Webster) forms, but there are occasional exceptions; for example, burnt (not burned) offerings.

(2) Hyphenation also occasionally varies from Webster; for example, we index drop-scenes (in Webster drop scenes) to isolate it from other drop entries.

(3) Dialect and other significantly variant spellings are generally indexed in Webster forms as well as in the original ('ammer/hammer).

(4) Alphabetization is (we hope) strict, which means that entries for inflected forms of a word may be widely separated from entries for the word itself; for example, nightcap, nightingale, nightmare and other entries separate night from night's. The standard order of plural and possessive forms is: lover's, lovers, lovers'.

(5) When an important word in a very familiar phrase is in a contracted form (Beauty's but skin deep; An honest man's the noblest work of God) it is indexed also in the singular (Beauty skin deep; Honest man noblest work). But most such contractions are indexed only in the original form (What cat's averse to fish).

(6) When entries under one keyword continue to another column of the index, the keyword is repeated at the top of the new column. If you find your keyword at the top of a column, check the foot of the previous column—or page if necessary—to be sure of covering all the entries under the keyword.

(7) The words of each entry are in the same order as in the quotation, with the keyword abbreviated in the correct position except when it starts the quotation (a and b with the page number indicate left and right columns on the page):

Hope, all h. abandon who enter here, 159b beautiful Evelyn H., 663b deferred maketh the heart sick, 24a feed on h., 201a is the thing with feathers, 735a

When the keyword occurs both at the start and in the body of the entry it is not abbreviated:

Alps, beyond A. lies Italy, 125a
on Alps arise, 403a

(8) There are so many familiar ways of indexing one familiar phrase under one keyword (Love, one jot of former l.; Love, jot of former l.; Intellect, monuments of unaging i.; Intellect, unaging i.), that you should look for your quotation in all possible alphabetical locations under the keyword. Several columns of entries may come between one possibility and another (as in the first example above).

(9) In checking a two-word term of which one word is the keyword (for example, old age), note that retention of the quotation's original order means that all entries about the term will not necessarily appear grouped together:

Age, dance attention upon old a., 885a green old a., 367b old a. and experience, 382b old a. should burn, 1070b
'tis well an old a. is out, 372a

(10) If you don't find your quotation under one keyword, try another. The first word of a quotation, moreover, is not necessarily a keyword. If you think Milton said fresh fields and pastures new, you will not find it under fields but you will (with its original fresh woods) under fresh, pastures, and new. We have, however, tried to include in footnotes and in the index such popular misquotations as A poor thing but mine own as well as the originals—in this case An ill-favored thing, sir, but mine own, from Shakespeare's As You Like It.

(11) If your quotation does not emerge under any of the remembered keywords, try synonyms or related words. A quotation about valor is often remembered as about courage; dullness as boredom; approbation as praise; and so on.

(12) If you are using the index as a topical source (looking for all the quotations you can find about nature or bravery or wisdom or love or whatever), think of all the synonyms and related words you can—and then, in addition, browse, eat, enjoy. You'll find more.

And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness. 1:26

Male and female created he them.

Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth. 1:28

And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made. 2:2

And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed

¹ Among all our joys, there was no one that more filled our hearts, than the blessed continuance of the preaching of God's sacred Word among us; which is that inestimable treasure, which excelleth all the riches of the earth; because the fruit thereof extendeth itself, not only to the time spent in this transitory world, but directeth and disposeth men unto that eternal happiness which is above in heaven. — The Translators' Dedication to James I into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul.

Genesis 2:7

And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden. 2:8

The tree of life also in the midst of the garden. 2:9

But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die. 2:17

It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him an help meet for him. 2:18

And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept: and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof.

And the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, made he a woman. 2:21-22

Bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh. 2:23

Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh.

And they were both naked, the man and his wife, and were not ashamed. 2:24-25

Now the serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field. 3:1

Your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil. 3:5

And they sewed fig leaves together, and made themselves aprons.¹

And they heard the voice of the Lord God walking in the garden in the cool of the day. 3:7-8

¹ The Geneva Bible of 1557-1560 was known sometimes as the Breeches Bible because in this passage "aprons" is rendered as "breeches."

The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat. Genesis 3:12

What is this that thou hast done? And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat.

And the Lord God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life. 3:13-14

It shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel. 3:15

In sorrow thou shalt bring forth children. 3:16

In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.

And Adam called his wife's name Eve; because she was the mother of all living. 3:19-20

So he drove out the man: and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life. 3:24

And Abel was a keeper of sheep, but Cain was a tiller of the ground. 4:2

Am I my brother's keeper? 4:9

The voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground. 4:10

A fugitive and a vagabond shalt thou be in the earth. 4:12

My punishment is greater than I can bear. 4:13

And the Lord set a mark upon Cain. 4:15

And Cain went out from the presence of the Lord, and dwelt in the land of Nod. 4:16

Jabal: he was the father of such as dwell in tents. 4:20

Jubal: he was the father of all such as handle the harp and organ. Genesis 4:21

And all the days of Methuselah were nine hundred sixty and nine years. 5:27

And Noah begat Shem, Ham, and Japheth. 5:32

There were giants in the earth in those days . . . mighty men which were of old, men of renown. 6:4

Make thee an ark of gopher wood. 6:14

And of every living thing of all flesh, two of every sort shalt thou bring into the ark. 6:19

And the rain was upon the earth forty days and forty nights. 7:12

But the dove found no rest for the sole of her foot. 8:9

And, lo, in her mouth was an olive leaf pluckt off. 8:11

For the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth. 8:21

While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease. 8:22

Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed: for in the image of God made he man. 9:6

I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth. 9:13

Even as Nimrod the mighty hunter before the Lord. 10:9

Therefore is the name of it called Babel; because the Lord did there confound the language of all the earth. 11:9

Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee . . . for we be brethren. 13:8

Abram dwelled in the land of Canaan, and Lot dwelled in the cities of the plain, and pitched his tent toward Sodom. Genesis 13:12

In a good old age. 15:15

His [Ishmael's] hand will be against every man, and every man's hand against him. 16:12

Thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee. 17:5

My Lord, if now I have found favour in thy sight, pass not away, I pray thee, from thy servant. 18:3

But his [Lot's] wife looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt. 19:26

My son, God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt offering. 22:8

Behold behind him a ram caught in a thicket by his horns. 22:13

Esau was a cunning hunter, a man of the field; and Jacob was a plain man, dwelling in tents. 25:27

And he [Esau] sold his birthright unto Jacob.

Then Jacob gave Esau bread and pottage of lentiles. 25:33-34

The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau. 27:22

Thy brother came with subtilty, and hath taken away thy blessing. 27:35

He [Jacob] dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it. 28:12

Surely the Lord is in this place; and I knew it not. 28:16

This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven. 28:17

Jacob served seven years for Rachel; and they seemed unto him but a few days, for the love he had to her. 29:20

Mizpah; for he said, The Lord watch, between me and thee, when we are absent one from another.

And Jacob was left alone; and there wrestled a man with him until the breaking of the day. 32:24

I will not let thee go, except thou bless me. 32:26

And Jacob called the name of the place Peniel: for I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved.¹ 32:30

Behold, this dreamer cometh. 37:19

They stript Joseph out of his coat, his coat of many colours. 37:23

The Lord made all that he did to prosper in his hand. 39:3

And she caught him by his garment, saying, Lie with me: and he left his garment in her hand, and fled, and got him out. 39:12

And the seven thin and ill favoured kine that came up after them are seven years; and the seven empty ears blasted with the east wind shall be seven years of famine. 41:27

Then shall ye bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave. 42:38

But Benjamin's mess was five times so much as any of theirs. 43:34

Wherefore have ye rewarded evil for good? 44:4

The man in whose hand the cup is found, he shall be my servant. 44:17

And he fell upon his brother Benjamin's neck, and wept; and Benjamin wept upon his neck. 45:14

And ye shall eat the fat of the land. 45:18

And they came into the land of Goshen. 46:28

But I will lie with my fathers, and thou shalt carry me out of Egypt, and bury me in their buryingplace. And he said, I will do as thou hast said. 47:30

⁴ I lift up my eyes to the hills. From whence does my help come? — Revised Standard Version

Let us go into the house of the Lord. Psalms 122:1

Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces. 122:7

They that sow in tears shall reap in joy.

He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him. 126:5-6

Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it: except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain. 127:1

He giveth his beloved sleep. 127:2

As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man; so are children of the youth.

Happy is the man that hath his quiver full of them. 127:4-5

Out of the depths have I cried unto thee, O Lord. 130:1

My soul waiteth for the Lord more than they that watch for the morning. 130:6

I will not give sleep to mine eyes, or slumber to mine eyelids.¹ 132:4

Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity! 133:1

By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down, yea, we wept, when we remembered Zion.²

We hanged our harps upon the willows in the midst thereof.

For there they that carried us away captive required of us a song; and they that wasted us required of us mirth, saying, Sing us one of the songs of Zion.

How shall we sing the Lord's song in a strange land?

If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning.

If I do not remember thee, let my

² By the waters of Babylon we sat down and wept: when we remembered thee, O Sion. — Book of Common Prayer, Psalm 137:1

tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth.
Psalms 137:1-6

O Lord, thou hast searched me, and known me.

Thou knowest my downsitting and mine uprising, thou understandest my thought afar off.
139:1-2

Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence?

If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there.

If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea;

Even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me.
139:7-10

The darkness and the light are both alike to thee.
139:12

I am fearfully and wonderfully made.
139:14

They have sharpened their tongues like a serpent.
140:3

Thou openest thine hand, and satisfiest the desire of every living thing.
145:16

The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him in truth.
145:18

Put not your trust in princes.
146:3

He telleth the number of the stars; he calleth them all by their names.
147:4

Let every thing that hath breath praise the Lord.
150:6

To give subtilty to the simple, to the young man knowledge and discretion.
The Proverbs 1:4

My son, if sinners entice thee, consent thou not.
1:10

Wisdom crieth without; she uttereth her voice in the streets.
1:20

Length of days is in her right hand; and in her left hand riches and honor.
3:16

Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace.

Proverbs 3:17

Be not afraid of sudden fear. 3:25

Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding. 4:7

The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. 4:18

Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life. 4:23

For the lips of a strange woman drop as an honeycomb, and her mouth is smother than oil:

But her end is bitter as wormwood, sharp as a two-edged sword. 5:3-4

Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise:

Which having no guide, overseer, or ruler,

Provideth her meat in the summer, and gathereth her food in the harvest. 6:6-8

Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep: ¹

So shall thy poverty come as one that travelleth, and thy want as an armed man. 6:10-11

Lust not after her beauty in thine heart; neither let her take thee with her eyelids. 6:25

Can a man take fire in his bosom, and his clothes not be burned?

Can one go upon hot coals, and his feet not be burned? 6:27-28

Jealousy is the rage of a man: therefore he will not spare in the day of vengeance. 6:34

He goeth after her straightway, as an ox goeth to the slaughter. 7:22

I love them that love me; and those that seek me early shall find me. 8:17

Wisdom hath builded her house, she hath hewn out her seven pillars. 9:1

Reprove not a scorner, lest he hate thee: rebuke a wise man, and he will love thee. Proverbs 9:8

Stolen waters are sweet, and bread eaten in secret is pleasant. 9:17

A wise son maketh a glad father: but a foolish son is the heaviness of his mother. 10:1

Blessings are upon the head of the just: but violence covereth the mouth of the wicked.

The memory of the just is blessed: but the name of the wicked shall rot. 10:6-7

Hatred stirreth up strifes: but love covereth all sins. 10:12

In the multitude of counsellors there is safety.¹

He that is surety for a stranger shall smart for it. 11:14-15

As a jewel of gold in a swine's snout, so is a fair woman which is without discretion. 11:22

He that trusteth in his riches shall fall. 11:28

A virtuous woman is a crown to her husband. 12:4

A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast: but the tender mercies of the wicked are cruel. 12:10

The way of a fool is right in his own eyes. 12:15

Hope deferred maketh the heart sick. 13:12

The way of transgressors is hard. 13:15

The desire accomplished is sweet to the soul. 13:19

He that spareth his rod hateth his son: but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes.² 13:24

Fools make a mock at sin. 14:9

The heart knoweth his own bitterness; and a stranger doth not intermeddle with his joy. Proverbs 14:10

Even in laughter the heart is sorrowful. 14:13

The prudent man looketh well to his going. 14:15

In all labor there is profit: but the talk of the lips tendeth only to penury. 14:23

Righteousness exalteth a nation. 14:34

A soft answer turneth away wrath. 15:1

A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance: but by sorrow of the heart the spirit is broken. 15:13

He that is of a merry heart hath a continual feast.

Better is little with the fear of the Lord than great treasure and trouble therewith.

Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a stalled ox and hatred therewith.¹ 15:15-17

A wrathful man stirreth up strife: but he that is slow to anger appeaseth strife. 15:18

A word spoken in due season, how good is it! 15:23

Before honour is humility. 15:33 and 18:12

A man's heart deviseth his way: but the Lord directeth his steps. 16:9

Pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall.² 16:18

The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness.

He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city. 16:31-32

Whoso mocketh the poor reproacheth his Maker. 17:5

He that repeateth a matter separateth very friends. Proverbs 17:9

Whoso rewardeth evil for good, evil shall not depart from his house. 17:13

A merry heart doeth good like a medicine. 17:22

He that hath knowledge spareth his words: and a man of understanding is of an excellent spirit.

Even a fool, when he holdeth his peace, is counted wise. 17:27-28

A fool's mouth is his destruction. 18:7

A wounded spirit who can bear? 18:14

A brother offended is harder to be won than a strong city: and their contentions are like the bars of a castle. 18:19

Whoso findeth a wife findeth a good thing. 18:22

A man that hath friends must show himself friendly: and there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother. 18:24

Wealth maketh many friends. 19:4

A foolish son is the calamity of his father: and the contentions of a wife are a continual dropping. 19:13

He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord. 19:17

Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging. 20:1

It is an honour for a man to cease from strife: but every fool will be meddling. 20:3

Even a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure, and whether it be right.

The hearing ear, and the seeing eye, the Lord hath made even both of them. 20:11-12

It is naught, it is naught, saith the buyer: but when he is gone his way, then he boasteth. 20:14

Bread of deceit is sweet to a man; but afterwards his mouth shall be filled with gravel. Proverbs 20:17

Meddle not with him that flattereth with his lips. 20:19

It is better to dwell in a corner of the housetop, than with a brawling woman in a wide house. 21:9 and 25:24

A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches. 22:1

Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it. 22:6

The borrower is servant to the lender. 22:7

Bow down thine ear, and hear the words of the wise, and apply thine heart unto my knowledge.

For it is a pleasant thing if thou keep them within thee; they shall withal be fitted in thy lips.¹ 22:17-18

Have I not written to thee excellent things in counsels and knowledge?²

That I might make thee know the certainty of the words of truth; that thou mightest answer the words of truth to them that send unto thee?³ 22:20-21

Remove not the ancient landmark.⁴ 22:28

Seest thou a man diligent in his business? He shall stand before kings.⁵ 22:29

Put a knife to thy throat, if thou be a man given to appetite. 23:2

Labor not to be rich: cease from thine own wisdom.⁶ 23:4

Riches certainly make themselves wings.⁷ 23:5

As he thinketh in his heart, so is he. 23:7

The drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty: and drowsiness shall clothe a man with rags.

Despise not thy mother when she is old. 23:22

Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup, when it moveth itself aright.

At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder. 23:31-32

A wise man is strong; yea, a man of knowledge increaseth strength. 24:5

If thou faint in the day of adversity, thy strength is small. 24:10

A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver. 25:11

If thine enemy be hungry, give him bread to eat; and if he be thirsty, give him water to drink:

For thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head.¹ 25:21-22

As cold waters to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country. 25:25

For men to search their own glory is not glory. 25:27

Answer a fool according to his folly. 26:5

As a dog returneth to his vomit, so a fool returneth to his folly.

Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit? There is more hope of a fool than of him.

The slothful man saith, There is a lion in the way; a lion is in the streets. 26:11-13

Whoso diggeth a pit shall fall therein: and he that rolleth a stone, it will return upon him. 26:27

Boast not thyself of tomorrow; for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth.² 27:1

Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth. 27:2

Open rebuke is better than secret love.

Faithful are the wounds of a friend; but the kisses of an enemy are deceitful. Proverbs 27:5-6

To the hungry soul every bitter thing is sweet. 27:7

Better is a neighbour that is near than a brother far off. 27:10

Iron sharpeneth iron; so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend. 27:17

The wicked flee when no man pursueth: but the righteous are bold as a lion. 28:1

He that maketh haste to be rich shall not be innocent. 28:20

He that trusteth in his own heart is a fool. 28:26

He that giveth unto the poor shall not lack. 28:27

A fool uttereth all his mind. 29:11

Where there is no vision, the people perish. 29:18

A man's pride shall bring him low: but honour shall uphold the humble in spirit. 29:23

Give me neither poverty nor riches. 30:8

Accuse not a servant unto his master. 30:10

The horseleach hath two daughters, crying, Give, give. 30:15

There be three things which are too wonderful for me, yea, four which I know not:

The way of an eagle in the air; the way of a serpent upon a rock; the way of a ship in the midst of the sea; and the way of a man with a maid. 30:18-19

Give strong drink unto him that is ready to perish, and wine unto those that be of heavy hearts. 31:6

Who can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies.

The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her. Proverbs 31:10-11

Her husband is known in the gates, when he sitteth among the elders of the land. 31:23

Strength and honour are her clothing. 31:25

In her tongue is the law of kindness. She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness.

Her children arise up, and call her blessed. 31:26-28

Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all.

Favour is deceitful, and beauty is vain: but a woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised.

Give her of the fruit of her hands; and let her own works praise her in the gates. 31:29-31

Vanity of vanities, saith the Preacher, vanity of vanities; all is vanity.

What profit hath a man of all his labour which he taketh under the sun?

One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh: but the earth abideth for ever.

The sun also ariseth.

Ecclesiastes 1:2-5

All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full. 1:7

The eye is not satisfied with seeing, nor the ear filled with hearing. 1:8

There is no new thing under the sun. 1:9

There is no remembrance of former things; neither shall there be any remembrance of things that are to come with those that shall come after. 1:11

I have seen all the works that are done under the sun; and, behold, all is vanity and vexation of spirit.

That which is crooked cannot be made straight: and that which is wanting cannot be numbered.

Ecclesiastes 1:14-15

In much wisdom is much grief; and he that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow. 1:18

Wisdom excelleth folly, as far as light excelleth darkness. 2:13

One event happeneth to them all. 2:14

How dieth the wise man? as the fool. 2:16

To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven.

A time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted;

A time to kill, and a time to heal; a time to break down, and a time to build up;

A time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance;

A time to cast away stones, and a time to gather stones together; a time to embrace, and a time to refrain from embracing;

A time to get, and a time to lose; a time to keep, and a time to cast away;

A time to rend, and a time to sew; a time to keep silence, and a time to speak; ¹

A time to love, and a time to hate; a time of war, and a time of peace. 3:1-8

Wherefore I praised the dead which are already dead more than the living which are yet alive. 4:2

Better is an handful with quietness, than both the hands full with travail and vexation of spirit. 4:6

A threefold cord is not quickly broken. 4:12

Better is a poor and a wise child than an old and foolish king. 4:13

God is in heaven, and thou upon earth: therefore let thy words be few.
Ecclesiastes 5:2

Better is it that thou shouldest not vow, than that thou shouldest vow and not pay.
5:5

The sleep of a labouring man is sweet . . . but the abundance of the rich will not suffer him to sleep.
5:12

As he came forth of his mother's womb, naked shall he return to go as he came,¹ and shall take nothing of his labour, which he may carry away in his hand.²
5:15

A good name is better than precious ointment; and the day of death than the day of one's birth.³
7:1

It is better to go to the house of mourning, than to go to the house of feasting.
7:2

As the crackling of thorns under a pot, so is the laughter of the fool.
7:6

Better is the end of a thing than the beginning thereof.
7:8

In the day of prosperity be joyful, but in the day of adversity consider.
7:14

Be not righteous over much.
7:16

There is not a just man upon earth, that doeth good, and sinneth not.
7:20

And I find more bitter than death the woman, whose heart is snares and nets, and her hands as bands.
7:26

One man among a thousand have I found; but a woman among all those have I not found.
7:28

God hath made man upright; but they have sought out many inventions.
7:29

There is no discharge in that war.

A man hath no better thing under the sun, than to eat, and to drink, and to be merry.¹
Ecclesiastes 8:15

A living dog is better than a dead lion.

For the living know that they shall die: but the dead know not any thing, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten.

Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest.
9:10

The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong.
9:11

A feast is made for laughter, and wine maketh merry: but money answereth all things.

Ecclesiastes 12:1-4

The almond tree shall flourish, and the grasshopper shall be a burden, and desire shall fail; because man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets:

Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern.

Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it. 12:5-7

The words of the wise are as goads, and as nails fastened by the masters of assemblies. 12:11

Of making many books there is no end; and much study is a weariness of the flesh.

Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man.

For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil. 12:12-14

The song of songs, which is Solomon's. The Song of Solomon 1:1

I am black, but comely, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, as the tents of Kedar, as the curtains of Solomon. 1:5

O thou fairest among women. 1:8

I am the rose of Sharon, and the lily of the valleys. 2:1

As the apple tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved among the sons. 2:3

His banner over me was love.

Woe unto them that join house to house, that lay field to field, till there be no place, that they may be placed alone in the midst of the earth! 5:7-8

Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink. 5:11

Woe unto them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin as it were with a cart rope. 5:18

Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil. 5:20

I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple.

Above it stood the seraphims; each one had six wings; with twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly. 6:1-2

Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts: the whole earth is full of his glory. 6:3

Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts. 6:5

I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send me. 6:8

Then said I, Lord, how long?

And I will punish the world for their evil, and the wicked for their iniquity; and I will cause the arrogance of the proud to cease, and will lay low the haughtiness of the terrible. Isaiah 13:11

How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning! 14:12

Is this the man that made the earth to tremble, that did shake kingdoms. 14:16

The nations shall rush like the rushing of many waters. 17:13

And they shall fight every one against his brother. 19:2

The burden of the desert of the sea. As whirlwinds in the south pass through; so it cometh from the desert, from a terrible land. 21:1

Babylon is fallen, is fallen;¹ and all the graven images of her gods he hath broken unto the ground. 21:9

Watchman, what of the night? 21:11

Let us eat and drink; for tomorrow we shall die. 22:13

I will fasten him as a nail in a sure place. 22:23

Whose merchants are princes. 23:8

As with the maid, so with her mistress. 24:2

For thou hast been a strength to the poor, a strength to the needy in his distress. 25:4

A feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees. 25:6

He will swallow up death in victory;² and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces.³ 25:8

Open ye the gates, that the righteous nation which keepeth the truth may enter in.

Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee. 26:2-3

Leviathan, that crooked serpent . . . the dragon that is in the sea. 27:1

For precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little. 28:10

We have made a covenant with death, and with hell are we at agreement. 28:15

It shall be a vexation only to understand the report. 28:19

They are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink. 29:9

Their strength is to sit still.

Now go, write it before them in a table, and note it in a book, that it may be for the time to come for ever and ever. 30:7-8

The bread of adversity, and the water of affliction. 30:20

This is the way, walk ye in it. 30:21

Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness. 32:1

And a man shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadows of a great rock in a weary land. 32:2

An habitation of dragons, and a court for owls. 34:13

The desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose. 35:1

Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped.

Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing. 35:5-6

Sorrow and sighing shall flee away. 35:10

Thou trustest in the staff of this broken reed. Isaiah 36:6

Incline thine ear, O Lord, and hear. 37:17

I shall go softly all my years in the bitterness of my soul. 38:15

Comfort ye, comfort ye my people. 40:1

Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned: for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins.

The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God.¹ 40:2-3

Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low: and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain. 40:4

All flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field. 40:6

The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: ² but the word of our God shall stand for ever. 40:8

They helped every one his neighbour; and every one said to his brother, Be of good courage. 41:6

A bruised reed shall he not break, and the smoking flax shall he not quench. 42:3

Shall the clay say to him that fashioneth it, What makest thou? 45:9

O that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments! then had thy peace been as a river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea. 48:18

There is no peace, saith the Lord, unto the wicked. 48:22

Therefore the redeemed of the Lord shall return, and come with singing unto Zion. 51:11

Thou hast drunken the dregs of the cup of trembling. 51:17

Therefore hear now this. 51:21

How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace. 52:7

They shall see eye to eye. 52:8

He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief. 53:3

Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows. 53:4

All we like sheep have gone astray. 53:6

He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter.¹ 53:7

Ho, everyone that thirsteth, come ye to the waters. 55:1

The Wisdom of Solomon 3:9

Even so we in like manner, as soon as we were born, began to draw to our end. 5:13

For the hope of the ungodly is like dust that is blown away with the wind . . . and passeth away as the remembrance of a guest that tarrieth but a day. 5:14

For the very true beginning of her [wisdom] is the desire of discipline; and the care of discipline is love. 6:17

And when I was born, I drew in the common air, and fell upon the earth, which is of like nature; and the first voice which I uttered was crying, as all others do. 7:3

All men have one entrance into life, and the like goeth out. 7:6

The light that cometh from her [wisdom] never goeth out. 7:10

The Wisdom of Jesus the Son of Sirach, or Ecclesiasticus, 1:2

To whom hath the root of wisdom been revealed? 1:6

For the Lord is full of compassion and mercy, longsuffering, and very pitiful, and forgiveth sins, and saveth in time of affliction. 2:11

The greater thou art, the more humble thyself. 3:18

Many are in high place, and of renown: but mysteries are revealed unto the meek. 3:19

Seek not out the things that are too hard for thee, neither search the things that are above thy strength. 3:21

Be not curious in unnecessary matters: for more things are shewed unto thee than men understand. 3:23

Profess not the knowledge . . . that thou hast not.

A stubborn heart shall fare evil at the last. Ecclesiasticus 3:25-26

Wisdom exalteth her children, and layeth hold of them that seek her.

He that loveth her loveth life. 4:11-12

Observe the opportunity. 4:20

Be not as a lion in thy house, nor frantick among thy servants.

Let not thine hand be stretched out to receive, and shut when thou shouldst repay. 4:30-31

Set not thy heart upon thy goods; and say not, I have enough for my life. 5:1

Winnow not with every wind, and go not into every way. 5:9

Let thy life be sincere. 5:11

Be not ignorant of any thing in a great matter or a small. 5:15

If thou wouldest get a friend, prove him first. 6:7

A faithful friend is a strong defence: and he that hath found such an one hath found a treasure. 6:14

A faithful friend is the medicine of life. 6:16

If thou seest a man of understanding, get thee betimes unto him, and let thy foot wear the steps of his door. 6:36

Whatsoever thou takest in hand, remember the end, and thou shalt never do amiss. 7:36

Rejoice not over thy greatest enemy being dead, but remember that we die all. 8:7

Miss not the discourse of the elders. 8:9

Forsake not an old friend; for the new is not comparable to him: a new friend is as new wine; when it is old, thou shalt drink it with pleasure. 9:10

Pride is hateful before God and man.

Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.

Give us this day our daily bread.

And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.²

And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen. 6:9-13

Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal:

But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven. 6:19-20

For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. 6:21

The light of the body is the eye.

If therefore the light that is in thee

Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature?
6:27

Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin.
6:28

Even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.
6:29

Take therefore no thought for the morrow: for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.
6:34

Judge not, that ye be not judged.
7:1

With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.

And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye.
7:5

Neither cast ye your pearls before swine.
7:6

Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.
7:7

Or what man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone?
7:9

Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets.¹

Wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction.

Matthew 7:13

Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.
7:14

Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves.
7:15

By their fruits ye shall know them.
7:20

Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.
7:21

[The house] fell not: for it was founded upon a rock.
7:25

But the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.
8:12

The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.
8:20

Follow me; and let the dead bury their dead.
8:22

Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith?

each of them.

And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues. 2:3-4

Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee. 3:6

If this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought:

But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it. 5:38-39

Thy money perish with thee. 8:20

In the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity. 8:23

Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord. 9:1

Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? 9:4

It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks. 9:5

He is a chosen vessel unto me. 9:15

Immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales. 9:18

Love is the fulfilling of the law. 13:10

The night is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light.

Let us walk honestly, as in the day; not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying.

But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof.¹ 13:12-14

Doubtful disputations. 14:1

Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind. 14:5

For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself.

For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's. 14:7-8

Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace. 14:19

We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves. 15:1

I Corinthians 13:1

Though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing.

And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing.

Charity suffereth long, and is kind;
charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up. 13:2-4

Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.

Charity never faileth. 13:7-8

We know in part, and we prophesy in part.

But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away.

When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things.²

For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face:³ now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known.

And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity. 13:9-13

If the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle? 14:8

Let all things be done decently and in order. 14:40

And last of all he was seen of me also, as of one born out of due time.

For I am the least of the apostles, that am not meet to be called an

I Corinthians 15:8-10

But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept.

For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead.

For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

15:20-22

The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death.
15:26

Evil communications corrupt good manners.
15:33

Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die.
15:36

One star differeth from another star in glory.
15:41

It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption.
15:42

The first man is of the earth, earthy.
15:47

Behold, I show you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed,

In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed.

For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality.
15:51-53

Death is swallowed up in victory.¹

O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?
15:54-55

Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong.²
16:13

If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema Maranatha.
16:22

Not of the letter, but of the spirit: for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life.

20:12

I saw a new heaven and a new earth:³ for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea.

And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband.

God shall wipe away all tears⁴ from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away.

21:4

There shall be no night there.

22:5

He that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still: and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still: and he that is holy, let him be holy still.

And, behold, I come quickly.

22:11-12

I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last.

Thou art that.⁴

Chandogya Upanishad 6.8.7, etc.

² This is derived from a Latin antiphon, said to have been composed by Notker, a monk of St. Gall, in 911, while watching some workmen building a bridge at Martinsbrücke, in peril of their lives. It forms the groundwork of Luther's antiphon De Morte.

³ Ancient Indian literary chronology is conjectural. The dates given are approximate.

⁴ Tat tvam asi (Sanskrit). The context: That which is that subtle essence is the self of this All; it is the true; it is the Self. "Thou art that, O Svetaketu."

Lead me from the unreal to the real!

Lead me from darkness to light!
Lead me from death to immortality!¹
Brihadaranyaka Upanishad 1.3.28

Not thus, not thus.² Ib. 2.3.6

This Self is the honey of all beings, and all beings are the honey of this Self. Ib. 2.5.14

The gods love the obscure and hate the obvious.³ Ib. 4.2.2

Da da da⁴ (that is) Be subdued,

Sing, goddess, the wrath of Peleus' son Achilles, a destroying wrath which brought upon the Achaeans myriad woes, and sent forth to Hades many valiant souls of heroes.

The Iliad, bk. I, l. 1

And the plan of Zeus was being accomplished. I, 5

² Neti neti. The only possible description of the world soul self. The context: Not thus, not thus; for there is nothing else higher than this "not thus."

³ Translated by R. C. ZAEHNER.

⁴ The voice of the thunder. The full Sanskrit is: Da da da iti. Damyata datta da-yadhvamiti. See T. S. Eliot, The Waste Land, lines 400-433, and note.

⁵ Translated by F. MAX MÜLLER.

⁶ See EMERSON, Brahma, p. 604a. Bhagavad-Gītā 2.19 is almost identical.

⁷ Om is a sacred syllable used especially to begin and end a scriptural recitation.

⁸ Santi means "peace." T. S. Eliot, in his note to line 434 of The Waste Land, says, "'The Peace which passeth understanding' is our equivalent to this word."

A dream, too, is from Zeus.

The Iliad, bk. I, l. 63

He knew the things that were and the things that would be and the things that had been before. I, 70

If you are very valiant, it is a god, I think, who gave you this gift. I, 178

Speaking, he addressed her winged words. I, 201 and elsewhere

Whoever obeys the gods, to him they particularly listen. I, 218

From his tongue flowed speech sweeter than honey. I, 249

Rosy-fingered dawn appeared, the early-born. I, 477 and elsewhere

The son of Kronos [Zeus] spoke, and nodded with his darkish brows, and immortal locks fell forward from the lord's deathless head, and he made great Olympus tremble. I, 528

The Olympian is a difficult foe to oppose. I, 589

Uncontrollable laughter arose among the blessed gods.¹ I, 599

A councilor ought not to sleep the whole night through, a man to whom the populace is entrusted, and who has many responsibilities. II, 24

Proud is the spirit of Zeus-fostered kings — their honor comes from Zeus, and Zeus, god of council, loves them.
II, 196

A multitude of rulers is not a good

The Iliad, bk. III, l. 108

Like cicadas, which sit upon a tree in the forest and pour out their piping voices, so the leaders of Trojans were sitting on the tower.

III, 151

There is no reason to blame the Trojans and the well-greaved Achaeans that for such a woman they long suffer woes.

III, 156

Words like winter snowflakes.

III, 222

The sun, which sees all things and hears all things.

III, 277

Son of Atreus, what manner of speech has escaped the barrier of your teeth?

IV, 350

Far away in the mountains a shepherd hears their thundering.

IV, 455

He lives not long who battles with the immortals, nor do his children prattle about his knees when he has come back from battle and the dread fray.¹

V, 407

Not at all similar are the race of the immortal gods and the race of men who walk upon the earth.²

V, 441

Great-hearted Stentor with brazen voice, who could shout as loud as fifty other men.

V, 785

He was a wealthy man, and kindly to his fellow men; for dwelling in a house by the side of the road, he used to entertain all comers.

VI, 14

A generation of men is like a generation of leaves: the wind scatters some leaves upon the ground, while others the burgeoning wood brings forth — and the season of spring comes on. So of men one generation springs forth and another ceases.³

VI, 146

Always to be bravest and to be pre-eminent above others.

Victory shifts from man to man.

The Iliad, bk. VI, l. 339

May men say, "He is far greater than his father," when he returns from battle.

VI, 479

Smiling through tears.

VI, 484

Attach a golden chain from heaven, and all of you take hold of it, you gods and goddesses, yet would you not be able to drag Zeus the most high from heaven to earth.

VIII, 19

Hades is relentless and unyielding.

IX, 158

Hateful to me as the gates of Hades is that man who hides one thing in his heart and speaks another.

IX, 312

Even when someone battles hard, there is an equal portion for one who lingers behind, and in the same honor are held both the coward and the brave man; the idle man and he who has done much meet death alike.

IX, 318

To be both a speaker of words and a doer of deeds.¹

IX, 443

Prayers are the daughters of mighty Zeus, lame and wrinkled and slanting-eyed.

IX, 502

A companion's words of persuasion are effective.

XI, 793

It was built against the will of the immortal gods, and so it did not last for long.

XII, 8

The single best augury is to fight for one's country.

XII, 243

There is a strength in the union even of very sorry men.

XIII, 237

There is a fullness of all things, even of sleep and of love.

XIII, 636

You will certainly not be able to take the lead in all things yourself, for to one man a god has given deeds of war, and to another the dance, to another the lyre and song, and in another wide-sounding Zeus puts a good mind.

It is not possible to fight beyond your strength, even if you strive.

The Iliad, bk. XIII, l. 787

She [Aphrodite] spoke and loosened from her bosom the embroidered girdle of many colors into which all her allurements were fashioned. In it was love and in it desire and in it blandishing persuasion which steals the mind even of the wise.

XIV, 214

There she met sleep, the brother of death.¹

XIV, 246

The hearts of the noble may be turned [by entreaty].

XV, 203

It is not unseemly for a man to die fighting in defense of his country.²

XV, 496

Of men who have a sense of honor, more come through alive than are slain, but from those who flee comes neither glory nor any help.

XV, 563

The outcome of the war is in our hands; the outcome of words is in the council.

XVI, 630

But he, mighty man, lay mightily in the whirl of dust, forgetful of his horsemanship.

XVI, 775

Once harm has been done, even a fool understands it.

XVII, 32

The most preferable of evils.³

XVII, 105

Surely there is nothing more wretched than a man, of all the things

I too shall lie in the dust when I am dead, but now let me win noble renown.

XVIII, 120

Zeus does not bring all men's plans to fulfillment.

XVIII, 328

The Erinyes, who exact punishment of men underground if one swears a false oath.

XIX, 259

Not even Achilles will bring all his words to fulfillment.

XX, 369

Miserable mortals who, like leaves, at one moment flame with life, eating the produce of the land, and at another moment weakly perish.

XXI, 463

It is entirely seemly for a young man killed in battle to lie mangled by the bronze spear. In his death all things appear fair. But when dogs shame the gray head and gray chin and nakedness of an old man killed, it is the most piteous thing that happens among wretched mortals.

XXII, 71

Then the father held out the golden scales, and in them he placed two fates of dread death.

XXII, 209

There are no compacts between lions and men, and wolves and lambs have no concord.

XXII, 262

By the ships there lies a dead man, unwept, unburied: Patroclus.²

XXII, 386

Remembering this, he wept bitterly, lying now on his side, now on his back, now on his face.

XXIV, 9

The fates have given mankind a patient soul.

XXIV, 49

Thus have the gods spun the thread for wretched mortals: that they live in grief while they themselves are without cares; for two jars stand on the floor of Zeus of the gifts which he gives, one of evils and another of blessings.

The Iliad, bk. XXIV, l. 525

Tell me, muse, of the man of many resources who wandered far and wide after he sacked the holy citadel of Troy, and he saw the cities and learned the thoughts of many men, and on the sea he suffered in his heart many woes.

The Odyssey, bk. I, l. 1

By their own follies they perished, the fools.

I, 7

Look now how mortals are blaming the gods, for they say that evils come from us, but in fact they themselves have woes beyond their share because of their own follies.

I, 32

Surely these things lie on the knees of the gods.

I, 267

You ought not to practice childish ways, since you are no longer that age.¹

I, 296

For rarely are sons similar to their fathers: most are worse, and a few are better than their fathers.

II, 276

Gray-eyed Athena sent them a favorable breeze, a fresh west wind, singing over the wine-dark sea.

II, 420

A young man is embarrassed to question an older one.

III, 24

All men have need of the gods.

III, 48

The minds of the everlasting gods are not changed suddenly.

III, 147

A small rock holds back a great wave.

III, 296

No mortal could vie with Zeus, for his mansions and his possessions are deathless.

IV, 78

She [Helen] threw into the wine which they were drinking a drug which takes away grief and passion and brings forgetfulness of all ills.

IV, 220

The immortals will send you to the Elysian plain at the ends of the earth, where fair-haired Rhadamanthys is. There life is supremely easy for men. No snow is there, nor ever heavy winter storm, nor rain, and Ocean is ever sending gusts of the clear-blowing west wind to bring coolness to men.

The Odyssey, bk. IV, l. 563

Olympus, where they say there is an abode of the gods, ever unchanging: it is neither shaken by winds nor ever wet with rain, nor does snow come near it, but clear weather spreads cloudless about it, and a white radiance stretches above it.¹

VI, 42

May the gods grant you all things which your heart desires, and may they give you a husband and a home and gracious concord, for there is nothing greater and better than this — when a husband and wife keep a household in oneness of mind, a great woe to their enemies and joy to their friends, and win high renown.

VI, 180

All strangers and beggars are from Zeus, and a gift, though small, is precious.²

VI, 207

Their ships are swift as a bird or a thought.

VII, 36

We are quick to flare up, we races of men on the earth.

VII, 307

So it is that the gods do not give all men gifts of grace — neither good looks nor intelligence nor eloquence.

VIII, 167

Evil deeds do not prosper; the slow man catches up with the swift.

VIII, 329

Even if you gods, and all the goddesses too, should be looking on, yet

¹ The majesty of the gods is revealed, and their peaceful abodes, which neither the winds shake nor clouds soak with showers, nor does the snow congealed with biting frost besmirch them with its white fall, but an ever cloudless sky vaults them over, and smiles with light bounteously spread abroad. — LUCRETIVS [95-55 B.C.], De Rerum Natura III, 18

The Odyssey, bk. VIII, l. 341

Among all men on the earth bards have a share of honor and reverence, because the muse has taught them songs and loves the race of bards.

VIII, 479

Thus she spoke; and I longed to embrace my dead mother's ghost. Thrice I tried to clasp her image, and thrice it slipped through my hands, like a shadow, like a dream.¹

XI, 204

They strove to pile Ossa on Olympus, and on Ossa Pelion with its leafy forests, that they might scale the heavens.²

XI, 315

There is a time for many words, and there is also a time for sleep.³

XI, 379

There is nothing more dread and more shameless than a woman who plans such deeds in her heart as the foul deed which she plotted when she contrived her husband's murder.

XI, 427

In the extravagance of her evil she has brought shame both on herself and on all women who will come after her, even on one who is virtuous.

XI, 432

Therefore don't you be gentle to your wife either. Don't tell her everything you know, but tell her one thing and keep another thing hidden.

Friends, we have not till now been unacquainted with misfortunes.

XII, 208

It is tedious to tell again tales already plainly told.¹

XII, 452

The wine urges me on, the bewitching wine, which sets even a wise man to singing and to laughing gently and rouses him up to dance and brings forth words which were better unspoken.

XIV, 463

It is equally wrong to speed a guest who does not want to go, and to keep one back who is eager. You ought to make welcome the present guest, and send forth the one who wishes to go.²

XV, 72

Even his griefs are a joy long after to one that remembers all that he wrought and endured.³

Then dark death seized Argus, as soon as he had seen Odysseus in the twentieth year.

XVII, 326

The gods, likening themselves to all kinds of strangers, go in various disguises from city to city, observing the wrongdoing and the righteousness of men.

XVII, 485

Nothing feebler than a man does the earth raise up, of all the things which breathe and move on the earth, for he believes that he will never suffer evil in the future, as long as the gods give him success and he flourishes in his

Men flourish only for a moment.¹
XIX, 328

Dreams surely are difficult, confusing, and not everything in them is brought to pass for mankind. For fleeting dreams have two gates: one is fashioned of horn and one of ivory. Those which pass through the one of sawn ivory are deceptive, bringing tidings which come to nought, but those which issue from the one of polished horn bring true results when a mortal sees them.²

Your heart is always harder than a stone.

Therefore the fame of her excellence will never perish, and the immortals will fashion among earthly men a gracious song in honor of faithful Penelope.

HESIOD

c. 700 B.C.

With the muses of Helicon let us begin our singing.

The Theogony, l. 1

They once taught Hesiod beauteous song, when he was shepherding his sheep below holy Helicon.

Ib. 22

We know how to speak many falsehoods which resemble real things, but we know, when we will, how to speak true things.

Ib. 27

On his tongue they pour sweet dew, and from his mouth flow gentle words.

² See Virgil, p. 119a.

Love, who is most beautiful among the immortal gods, the melter of limbs, overwhelms in their hearts the intelligence and wise counsel of all gods and all men.

The Theogony, l. 120

From their eyelids as they glanced dripped love.

Ib. 910

There was not after all a single kind of strife, but on the earth there are two kinds: one of them a man might praise when he recognized her, but the other is blameworthy.

Works and Days, l. 11

Potter bears a grudge against potter, and craftsman against craftsman, and beggar is envious of beggar, and bard of bard.¹

Ib. 25

Fools, they do not even know how much more is the half than the whole.²

Ib. 40

Often an entire city has suffered because of an evil man.

Ib. 240

He harms himself who does harm to another, and the evil plan is most harmful to the planner.

Ib. 265

Badness you can get easily, in quantity: the road is smooth, and it lies close by. But in front of excellence the immortal gods have put sweat, and long and steep is the way to it, and rough at first. But when you come to the top, then it is easy, even though it is hard.³

Ib. 287

A bad neighbor is a misfortune, as much as a good one is a great blessing.

Ib. 346

Do not seek evil gains; evil gains are the equivalent of disaster.

Ib. 352

If you should put even a little on a little, and should do this often, soon this too would become big.⁴

Ib. 361

At the beginning of a cask and at the end take your fill; in the middle be sparing.

² See Browning, p. 664b, and note.

³ See Matthew 7:13-14, p. 41b.

⁴ See Chaucer, p. 169b.

The dawn speeds a man on his journey, and speeds him too in his work.

Works and Days, l. 579

Observe due measure, for right timing is in all things the most important factor.

Ib. 694

Gossip is mischievous, light and easy to raise, but grievous to bear and hard to get rid of. No gossip ever dies away entirely, if many people voice it: it too is a kind of divinity.

Ib. 761

ARCHILOCHUS

c. 680 B.C.

Some Saian glories in the shield which I left beside a bush, poor blameless weapon, against my will. But I have saved myself — what care I for that shield? Away with it! I'll get another one no worse.

CONFUCIUS¹

551-479 B.C.

Fine words and an insinuating appearance are seldom associated with true virtue.

The Confucian Analects, bk. 1:3

A youth, when at home, should be filial, and, abroad, respectful to his elders. 1:6

If a man withdraws his mind from the love of beauty, and applies it as sincerely to the love of the virtuous; if, in serving his parents, he can exert his utmost strength; if, in serving his prince, he can devote his life; if, in his intercourse with his friends, his words are sincere — although men say that he has not learned, I will certainly say that he has. 1:7

Hold faithfulness and sincerity as first principles. 1:8, ii

Have no friends not equal to yourself. 1:8, iii

When you have faults, do not fear to abandon them. 1:8, iv

He who exercises government by means of his virtue may be compared to the north polar star, which keeps its place and all the stars turn towards it. 2:1

[The superior man] acts before he speaks, and afterwards speaks according to his actions. 2:13

Learning without thought is labor lost; thought without learning is perilous.² 2:15

When you know a thing, to hold that you know it; and when you do not know a thing, to allow that you do not know it — this is knowledge.³ 2:17

Things that are done, it is needless to speak about . . . things that are past, it is needless to blame. 3:21, ii

³ See Lao Tzu, p. 75a.

I have not seen a person who loved virtue, or one who hated what was not virtuous. He who loved virtue would esteem nothing above it.

The Confucian Analects,
bk. 4:6, i

If a man in the morning hear the right way, he may die in the evening without regret. 4:8

The superior man . . . does not set his mind either for anything, or against anything; what is right he will follow. 4:10

When we see men of worth, we should think of equaling them; when we see men of a contrary character, we should turn inwards and examine ourselves. 4:17

The cautious seldom err. 4:23

Virtue is not left to stand alone. He who practices it will have neighbors. 4:25

Man is born for uprightness. If a man lose his uprightness, and yet live, his escape from death is the effect of mere good fortune. 6:16

The man of virtue makes the difficulty to be overcome his first business, and success only a subsequent consideration. 6:20

With coarse rice to eat, with water to drink, and my bended arm for a pillow — I have still joy in the midst of these things. Riches and honors acquired by unrighteousness are to me as a floating cloud. 7:15

I am not one who was born in the possession of knowledge; I am one who is fond of antiquity, and earnest in seeking it there. 7:19

Is virtue a thing remote? I wish to be virtuous, and lo! virtue is at hand. 7:29

The superior man is satisfied and composed; the mean man is always full of distress. 7:36

The people may be made to follow a path of action, but they may not be made to understand it. 8:9

If a superior man dwelt among [barbarians], what rudeness would there be?

The Confucian Analects,
bk. 9:13, ii

While you are not able to serve men, how can you serve spirits [of the dead]? . . . While you do not know life, how can you know about death?

11:11

To go beyond is as wrong as to fall short.

11:15, iii

He with whom neither slander that gradually soaks into the mind, nor statements that startle like a wound in the flesh, are successful may be called intelligent indeed.

12:6

In carrying on your government, why should you use killing [the unprincipled for the good of the unprincipled] at all? Let your evinced desires be for what is good, and the people will be good. The relation between superiors and inferiors is like that between the wind and the grass. The grass must bend when the wind blows across it.

12:19

Good government obtains when those who are near are made happy, and those who are far off are attracted.

13:16, ii

The firm, the enduring, the simple, and the modest are near to virtue.

13:27

The scholar who cherishes the love of comfort is not fit to be deemed a scholar.

14:3

The man who in the view of gain thinks of righteousness; who in the view of danger is prepared to give up his life; and who does not forget an old agreement however far back it extends — such a man may be reckoned a complete man.

14:13, ii

He who speaks without modesty will find it difficult to make his words good.

14:21

In ancient times, men learned with a view to their own improvement. Nowadays, men learn with a view to the approbation of others.

The Confucian Analects,
bk. 14:25

The superior man is modest in his speech, but exceeds in his actions.

14:29

Recompense injury with justice, and recompense kindness with kindness.

14:36, iii

The determined scholar and the man of virtue will not seek to live at the expense of injuring their virtue. They will even sacrifice their lives to preserve their virtue complete.

15:8

If a man take no thought about what is distant, he will find sorrow near at hand.

15:11

The superior man is distressed by his want of ability.

15:18

What the superior man seeks is in himself. What the mean man seeks is in others.

15:20

What you do not want done to yourself, do not do to others.¹

15:23

When a man's knowledge is sufficient to attain, and his virtue is not sufficient to enable him to hold, whatever he may have gained, he will lose again.

15:32, i

The superior man cannot be known in little matters, but he may be entrusted with great concerns. The small man may not be entrusted with great concerns, but he may be known in little matters.

15:33

Virtue is more to man than either water or fire. I have seen men die from treading on water and fire, but I have never seen a man die from treading the course of virtue.

15:34

By nature, men are nearly alike; by practice, they get to be wide apart.

17:2

To be able to practice five things everywhere under heaven constitutes perfect virtue. . . . [They are] gravity, generosity of soul, sincerity, earnestness, and kindness.

The Confucian Analects,
bk. 17:6

There are three things which the superior man guards against. In youth . . . lust. When he is strong . . . quarrelsome. When he is old . . . covetousness. 17:8

Without recognizing the ordinances of Heaven, it is impossible to be a superior man. 20:3, i

Without an acquaintance with the rules of propriety, it is impossible for the character to be established. 20:3, ii

Without knowing the force of words, it is impossible to know men. 20:3, iii

LAO TZU¹

Sixth century[?] B.C.

The Tao [Way] that can be told of is not the eternal Tao;

The name that can be named is not the eternal name.

The Nameless is the origin of Heaven and Earth;

The Named is the mother of all things.

Therefore let there always be non-being, so we may see their subtlety,

And let there always be being, so we may see their outcome.

The two are the same,

But after they are produced, they have different names.

They both may be called deep and profound.

Deeper and more profound,

The door of all subtleties!

The Way of Lao Tzu 1

When the people of the world all know beauty as beauty,

There arises the recognition of ugliness.

When they all know the good as good,

There arises the recognition of evil.

The Way of Lao Tzu 2

In the government of the sage,
He keeps their hearts vacuous,
Fills their bellies,
Weakens their ambitions,
And strengthens their bones,
He always causes his people to be without knowledge [cunning] or desire,
And the crafty to be afraid to act.

Ib. 3

Heaven and Earth are not humane.¹
They regard all things as straw dogs.²

Ib. 5

The spirit of the valley never dies.

It is called the subtle and profound female.

The gate of the subtle and profound female

Is the root of Heaven and Earth.

It is continuous, and seems to be always existing.

Use it and you will never wear it out.

Ib. 6

The best [man] is like water.

Water is good; it benefits all things and does not compete with them.

It dwells in [lowly] places that all disdain.

This is why it is so near to Tao.

Ib. 8

To produce things and to rear them,
To produce, but not to take possession of them,

To act, but not to rely on one's own ability,

To lead them, but not to master them —

This is called profound and secret virtue.

Ib. 10

He who loves the world as his body may be entrusted with the empire.

Ib. 13

We look at it [Tao] and do not see it;

² Straw dogs were used in sacrifices and then discarded.

Its name is The Invisible.
 We listen to it and do not hear it;
 Its name is The Inaudible.
 We touch it and do not find it;
 Its name is The Subtle [formless].
The Way of Lao Tzu 14

It is The Vague and Elusive.
 Meet it and you will not see its head.
 Follow it and you will not see its back.
Ib.

Manifest plainness,
 Embrace simplicity,
 Reduce selfishness,
 Have few desires. Ib. 19

Abandon learning and there will be no sorrow. Ib. 20

To yield is to be preserved whole.
 To be bent is to become straight.
 To be empty is to be full.
 To be worn out is to be renewed.
 To have little is to possess.
 To have plenty is to be perplexed.¹
Ib. 22

He who knows others is wise;
 He who knows himself is enlightened.
Ib. 33

[The sage] never strives himself for the great, and thereby the great is achieved. Ib. 34

Tao invariably takes no action, and yet there is nothing left undone.
 Reversion is the action of Tao.
 Weakness is the function of Tao.
 All things in the world come from being.
 And being comes from non-being.
Ib. 40

When the highest type of men hear
 Tao,
 They diligently practice it.
 When the average type of men hear
 Tao,
 They half believe in it.
 When the lowest type of men hear
 Tao,
 They laugh heartily at it. Ib. 41

The softest things in the world over-

 p. 40a.

come the hardest things in the world.
 Non-being penetrates that in which there is no space.
 Through this I know the advantage of taking no action.

The Way of Lao Tzu 43

There is no calamity greater than lavish desires.
 There is no greater guilt than discon-
 tentment.

And there is no greater disaster than greed. Ib. 46

One may know the world without going out of doors.

One may see the Way of Heaven without looking through the windows.
 The further one goes, the less one knows.¹

Therefore the sage knows without going about,

Understands without seeing,
 And accomplishes without any action.
Ib. 47

He who possesses virtue in abundance
 May be compared to an infant. Ib. 55

He who knows does not speak.
 He who speaks does not know. Ib. 56

The more laws and order are made prominent,

The more thieves and robbers there will
 be. Ib. 57

Ruling a big country is like cooking a small fish.² Ib. 60

Tao is the storehouse of all things.
 It is the good man's treasure and the bad man's refuge. Ib. 62

A journey of a thousand miles must begin with a single step.³ Ib. 64

People are difficult to govern because they have too much knowledge.
Ib. 65

I have three treasures. Guard and keep them:

¹ I.e., the more one studies, the further one is from the Tao.

² I.e., too much handling will spoil it.

³ Traditional translation.

The first is deep love,
The second is frugality,
And the third is not to dare to be ahead of the world.

Because of deep love, one is courageous.

Because of frugality, one is generous.

Because of not daring to be ahead of the world, one becomes the leader of the world.

The Way of Lao Tzu 67

When armies are mobilized and issues joined,

The man who is sorry over the fact will win. Ib. 69

To know that you do not know is the best.

To pretend to know when you do not know is a disease. ¹ Ib. 71

Heaven's net is indeed vast.

Though its meshes are wide, it misses nothing. ² Ib. 73

To undertake executions for the master executioner [Heaven] is like hewing wood for the master carpenter.

Whoever undertakes to hew wood for the master carpenter rarely escapes injuring his own hands. Ib. 74

The Way of Heaven has no favorites.
It is always with the good man.

Ib. 79

Let there be a small country with few people. . . .

Though neighboring communities overlook one another and the crowing of cocks and barking of dogs can be heard,

Yet the people there may grow old and die without ever visiting one another. Ib. 80

True words are not beautiful; ³

Beautiful words are not true.

A good man does not argue;

He who argues is not a good man.

A wise man has no extensive knowledge;

He who has extensive knowledge is not a wise man. ¹

The sage does not accumulate for himself.

The more he uses for others, the more he has himself.

The more he gives to others, the more he possesses of his own.

The Way of Heaven is to benefit others and not to injure.

The Way of the sage is to act but not to compete.

HIPPOCRATES

c. 460 — 400 B.C.

I swear by Apollo Physician, by Asclepius, by Health, by Panacea, and by all the gods and goddesses, making them my witnesses, that I will carry out, according to my ability and judgment, this oath and this indenture. To hold my teacher in this art equal to my own parents; to make him partner in my livelihood; when he is in need of money to share mine with him; to consider his family as my own brothers, and to teach them this art, if they want to learn it, without fee or indenture . . . I will use treatment to help the sick according to my ability and judgment, but never with a view to injury and wrongdoing . . . I will keep pure and holy both my life and my art . . . In whatsoever houses I enter, I will enter to help the sick, and I will abstain from all intentional wrongdoing and harm, especially from abusing the bodies of man or woman, bond or free. And whatsoever I shall see or hear in the course of my profession in my intercourse with men, if it be what should not be published abroad, I will never divulge, holding such things to be holy secrets. Now if I carry out this oath, and break it not, may I gain forever reputation among all men for my life and for my art; but if I transgress it and forswear myself, may the opposite befall me.

The Physician's Oath ¹

Healing is a matter of time, but it is sometimes also a matter of opportunity.

Precepts,¹ ch. 1

Sometimes give your services for nothing, calling to mind a previous benefaction or present satisfaction. And if there be an opportunity of serving one who is a stranger in financial straits, give full assistance to all such. For where there is love of man, there is also love of the art. For some patients, though conscious that their condition is perilous, recover their health simply through their contentment with the goodness of the physician. And it is well to superintend the sick to make them well, to care for the healthy to keep them well, also to care for one's own self, so as to observe what is seemly.

THUCYDIDES¹

c. 460 – 400 B.C.

Thucydides, an Athenian, wrote the history of the war between the Peloponnesians and the Athenians; he began at the moment that it broke out, believing that it would be a great war, and more memorable than any that had preceded it.

The History of the Peloponnesian War [431–413 B.C.], bk. I, sec. 1

With reference to the narrative of events, far from permitting myself to derive it from the first source that came to hand, I did not even trust my own impressions, but it rests partly on what I saw myself, partly on what others saw for me, the accuracy of the report being always tried by the most severe and detailed tests possible. My conclusions have cost me some labor from the want of coincidence between accounts of the same occurrences by different eyewitnesses, arising sometimes from imperfect memory, sometimes from undue partiality for one side or the other. The absence of romance in my history will, I fear, detract somewhat from its interest; but I shall be content if it is judged useful by those inquirers who desire an exact knowledge of the past as an aid to the interpretation of the future, which in the course of human things must resemble if it does not reflect it. My history has been composed to be an everlasting possession, not the showpiece of an hour.²

Ib. 22

The great wish of some is to avenge themselves on some particular enemy, the great wish of others to save their own pocket. Slow in assembling, they devote a very small fraction of the time to the consideration of any public object, most of it to the prosecution of their own objects. Meanwhile each fancies that no harm will come of his neglect, that it is the business of somebody else to look after this or that for him; and so, by the same notion being entertained by all separately, the common cause imperceptibly decays.¹

The History of the Peloponnesian War, bk. I, sec. 141

Our constitution is named a democracy, because it is in the hands not of the few but of the many. But our laws secure equal justice for all in their private disputes, and our public opinion welcomes and honors talent in every branch of achievement, not for any sectional reason but on grounds of excellence alone. And as we give free play to all in our public life, so we carry the same spirit into our daily relations with one another. We have no black looks or angry words for our neighbor if he enjoys himself in his own way, and we abstain from the little acts of churlishness which, though they leave no mark, yet cause annoyance to whoso notes them. Open and friendly in our private intercourse, in our public acts we keep strictly within the control of law. We acknowledge the restraint of reverence; we are obedient to whomsoever is set in authority, and to the laws, more especially to those which offer protection to the oppressed and those unwritten ordinances whose transgression brings admitted shame.

Ib. II (Funeral Oration of Pericles), 37

We are lovers of beauty without extravagance, and lovers of wisdom without unmanliness. Wealth to us is not mere material for vainglory but an opportunity for achievement; and poverty we think it no disgrace to acknowledge but a real degradation to make no effort to overcome.

Ib. 41

Fix your eyes on the greatness of Athens as you have it before you day by day, fall in love with her, and when you feel her great, remember that this greatness was won by men with courage, with knowledge of their duty, and with a sense of honor in action . . . So they gave their bodies to the commonwealth and received, each for his own memory, praise that will never die, and with it the grandest of all sepulchers, not that in which their mortal bones are laid, but a home in the minds of men, where their glory remains fresh to stir to speech or action as the occasion comes by. For the whole earth is the sepulcher of famous men; and their story is not graven only on stone over their native earth, but lives on far away, without visible symbol, woven into the stuff of other men's lives. For you now it remains to rival what they have done and, knowing the secret of happiness to be freedom and the secret of freedom a brave heart, not idly to stand aside from the enemy's onset.²

Ib. VIII, 86

This was the greatest event in the war, or, in my opinion, in Greek history; at once most glorious to the victors and most calamitous to the conquered. They were beaten at all points and altogether; their sufferings in every way were great. They were totally destroyed — their fleet, their army, everything — and few out of many returned home. So ended the Sicilian expedition.

And the true order of going, or being led by another, to the things of love, is to begin from the beauties of earth and mount upwards for the sake of that other beauty, using these steps only, and from one going on to two, and from two to all fair forms to fair practices, and from fair practices to fair notions, until from fair notions he arrives at the notion of absolute beauty, and at last knows what the essence of beauty is.

Dialogues, Symposium 211

Beholding beauty with the eye of the mind, he will be enabled to bring forth, not images of beauty, but realities (for he has hold not of an image but of a reality), and bringing forth and nourishing true virtue to become the friend of God and be immortal, if mortal man may.

The absolute natures or kinds are known severally by the absolute idea of knowledge.
Ib. 134

If a man, fixing his attention on these and the like difficulties, does away with ideas of things and will not admit that every individual thing has its own determinate idea which is always one and the same, he will have nothing on which his mind can rest; and so he will utterly destroy the power of reasoning.
Ib. 135

You cannot conceive the many without the one.
Ib. 166

Let us affirm what seems to be the truth, that, whether one is or is not, one and the others in relation to themselves and one another, all of them, in every way, are and are not, and appear to be and appear not to be.

Dialogues, Parmenides 166

Well, my art of midwifery is in most respects like theirs; but differs, in that I attend men and not women, and I look after their souls when they are in labor, and not after their bodies: and the triumph of my art is in thoroughly examining whether the thought which the mind of the young man brings forth is a false idol or a noble and true birth.

Ib. Theaetetus 150

He [the philosopher] does not hold aloof in order that he may gain a reputation; but the truth is, that the outer form of him only is in the city: his mind, disdaining the littlenesses and nothingnesses of human beings, is "flying all abroad" as Pindar says, measuring earth and heaven and the things which are under and on the earth and above the heaven, interrogating the whole nature of each and all in their entirety, but not condescending to anything which is within reach.

Ib. 173

I would have you imagine, then, that there exists in the mind of man a block of wax, which is of different sizes in different men; harder, moister, and having more or less of purity in one than another, and in some of an intermediate quality. . . . Let us say that this tablet is a gift of Memory, the mother of the Muses; and that when we wish to remember anything which we have seen, or heard, or thought in our own minds, we hold the wax to the perceptions and thoughts, and in that material receive the impression of them as from the seal of a ring; and that we remember and know what is imprinted as long as the image lasts; but when the image is effaced, or cannot be taken, then we forget and do not know.

CHUANG TZU¹

369-286 B.C.

Great wisdom is generous; petty wisdom is contentious. Great speech is impassioned, small speech cantankerous.

On Leveling All Things

Take, for instance, a twig and a pillar, or the ugly person and the great beauty, and all the strange and monstrous transformations. These are all leveled together by Tao. Division is the same as creation; creation is the same as destruction. Ib.

I do not know whether I was then a man dreaming I was a butterfly, or whether I am now a butterfly dreaming I am a man. Ib.

All men know the utility of useful things; but they do not know the utility of futility. This Human World

He who pursues fame at the risk of losing his self is not a scholar.

The Great Supreme

Those who seek to satisfy the mind of man by hampering it with ceremonies and music and affecting charity and devotion have lost their original nature. Joined Toes

In the days of perfect nature, man lived together with birds and beasts, and there was no distinction of their kind. Who could know of the distinctions between gentlemen and common people? Being all equally without knowledge, their virtue could not go astray. Being all equally without desires, they were in a state of natural integrity, the people did not lose their [original] nature.

And then when Sages appeared, crawling for charity and limping with duty, doubt and confusion entered men's minds. They said they must make merry by means of music and enforce distinctions by means of ceremony, and the empire became divided against itself. . . . Were Tao and virtue not destroyed, what use would there be for charity and duty? Were men's natural instincts not lost, what need would there be for music and ceremonies? . . . Destruction of the natural integrity of these things for the production of articles of various kinds — this is the fault of the artisan. Destruction of Tao and virtue in order to introduce charity and duty — this is the error of the Sages. Horses' Hoofs

Banish wisdom, discard knowledge, and gangsters will stop!

Opening Trunks, or A Protest Against Civilization

For all men strive to grasp what they do not know, while none strive to grasp what they already know; and all strive to discredit what they do not excel in, while none strive to discredit what they do excel in. This is why there is chaos. Ib.

Cherish that which is within you, and shut off that which is without; for much knowledge is a curse.

On Tolerance

"The prince keeps [a] tortoise carefully enclosed in a chest in his ancestral temple. Now would this tortoise rather be dead and have its remains venerated, or would it rather be alive and wagging its tail in the mud?"

"It would rather be alive . . . and wagging its tail in the mud."

"Begone!" cried Chuangtse. "I too will wag my tail in the mud."

Ah Corydon, Corydon, what madness has caught you?

Eclogues II, 69

With Jove I begin.¹

Ib. III, 60

A sad thing is a wolf in the fold, rain on ripe corn, wind in the trees, the anger of Amaryllis.

Ib. 80

A snake lurks in the grass.

Ib. 93

Let us raise a somewhat loftier strain.²

Ib. IV, 1

The great cycle of the ages is renewed. Now the Maiden returns, returns the Golden Age; a new generation now descends from heaven.³

Ib. 5

We have made you [Priapus] of marble for the time being.

Ib. VII, 35

We are not all capable of everything.⁴

Ib. VIII, 63

Draw Daphnis from the town, my songs, draw Daphnis home.

Ib. 68

Hylax barks in the doorway.

Ib. 107

Your descendants shall gather your fruits.⁵

Ib. IX, 50

Time bears away all things, even our minds.

Ib. 51

Let us go singing as far as we go: the road will be less tedious.

Ib. 64

This last labor grant me, O Arethusa.

Ib. X, 1

What if Amyntas is dark? Violets are dark, too, and hyacinths.

Ib. 38

Georgics I, l. 30

Look with favor upon a bold beginning.³ Ib. 40

O farmers, pray that your summers be wet and your winters clear. Ib. 100

Practice and thought might gradually forge many an art. Ib. 133

Thrice they tried to pile Ossa on Pelion, yes, and roll up leafy Olympus upon Ossa; thrice the Father of Heaven split the mountains apart with his thunderbolt.⁴ Ib. 281

Frogs in the marsh mud drone their old lament. Ib. 378

Not every soil can bear all things.
Ib. II, 109

Ah too fortunate farmers, if they knew their own good fortune! Ib. 458

May the countryside and the gliding valley streams content me. Lost to fame, let me love river and woodland.
Ib. 485

Happy the man who could search out the causes of things.⁵ Ib. 490

And no less happy he who knows the

The phrase, designating a far-off land, has been in use since the Greek mariner Pytheas discovered in the fourth century B.C. an island
he named Thule six days north of England, thought to be Iceland. See Seneca, p. 131a, and Thomson, p. 419b.

³ Audacibus annue coeptis.

This phrase also (see note p. 116b) was adapted for use on the reverse of the Great Seal of the United States of America: Annuit coeptis. See p. 119b for the Latin on the face of the Great Seal.

This life the old Sabines knew long ago; Remus knew it, and his brother.
Ib. 532

Years grow cold to love.
Ib. III, 97

Time is flying never to return.¹
Ib. 284

All aglow is the work.²
Ib. IV, 169

A sudden madness came down upon the unwary lover [Orpheus] — forgivable, surely, if Death knew how to forgive. Ib. 488

I who once played shepherds' songs and in my brash youth sang of you, O
Tityrus, beneath the spreading beech.³
Ib. 565

Arms and the man I sing.⁴
Aeneid, bk. I, l. 1

Can heavenly minds yield to such rage? Ib. 11

So vast was the struggle to found the Roman state. Ib. 33

Night, pitch-black, lies upon the deep.⁵ Ib. 89

O thrice four times blessed! ⁶
Ib. 94

Fury provides arms. Ib. 150

[Concerning the Six Principles of painting]

The first is, that through a vitalizing spirit, a painting should possess the movement of life.

The second is, that by means of the brush, the structural basis should be established.

The third is, that the representation should so conform with the objects as to give their likenesses.

The fourth is, that the coloring should be applied according to their characteristics.

The fifth is, that through organization, place and position should be determined.

The sixth is, that by copying the ancient models should be perpetuated.⁴

*Discussion of the Six Principles of Painting*¹

CHING HAO

fl. 925

A youth who likes to study will in the end succeed. To begin with he should know that there are Six Essentials in painting. The first is called spirit; the second, rhythm; the third, thought; the fourth, scenery; the fifth, the brush, and the last is the ink.

Notes on Brushwork^{1, 2}

Resemblance reproduces the formal aspect of objects, but neglects their spirit; truth shows the spirit and substance in like perfection. He who tries to transmit the spirit by means of the formal aspect and ends by merely obtaining the outward appearance, will produce a dead thing.

ble; then waits for the answer, making sure every moment that it cannot be much longer before something comes. At last, frightfully late, is brought in — one's own note, still folded or tied exactly as one sent it, but so finger-marked and smudged that even the address is barely legible. "The family is not in residence," the messenger says, giving one back the note.

MURASAKI SHIKIBU

c. 978 – 1031

[The art of the novel] does not simply consist in the author's telling a story about the adventures of some other person. . . . It happens because the storyteller's own experience of men and things, whether for good or ill — not only what he has passed through himself, but even events which he has only witnessed or been told of — has moved him to an emotion so passionate that he can no longer keep it shut up in his heart. . . . There must never come a time, he feels, when men do not know about it. . . .

Clearly then, it is no part of the storyteller's craft to describe only what is good or beautiful. Sometimes, of course, virtue will be his theme, and he may then make such play with it as he will. But he is just as likely to have been struck by numerous examples of vice and folly in the world around him, and about them he has exactly the same feelings as about the preeminently good deeds which he encounters: they are important and must all be garnered in. Thus anything whatsoever may become the subject of a novel, provided only that it happens in this mundane life

⁴ Non teneas aurum totum quod splendet ut aurum [All that glitters is not gold].

This was considered a common proverb which had its roots in a Latin translation from ARISTOTLE: Yellow-colored objects appear to be gold. — Elenchi, bk. I, ch. 1

Hyt is not al gold that glareth. — CHAUCER, The House of Fame [1374-1385], bk. I, l. 272

1162-1241

In the expression of the emotions originality merits the first consideration. . . . The words used, however, should be old ones. . . .

The style should imitate the great poems of the masters of former times.
One must discard every last phrase of the sentiments and expressions written by men of recent times. . . .

One should impregnate one's mind with a constant study of the forms of expression of ancient poetry.⁵

There are no teachers of Japanese poetry. But they who take the old poems as their teachers, steep their minds in the old style, and learn their words from the masters of former time —who of them will fail to write poetry?

Quoted by Skelton, Heywood, Spenser, and others.

"Thanks be to God," says the Admiral; "the air is soft as in April in Seville, and it is a pleasure to be in it, so fragrant it is."

Here the people could stand it no longer and complained of the long voyage; but the Admiral cheered them as best he could, holding out good hope of the advantages they would have. He added that it was useless to complain, he had come [to go] to the Indies, and so had to continue it until he found them, with the help of Our Lord.

Ib. October 10, 1492

At two hours after midnight appeared the land, at a distance of 2 leagues. They handed all sails and set the treo, which is the mainsail without bonnets, and lay-to waiting for daylight Friday, when they arrived at an island of the Bahamas that was called in the Indians' tongue Guanahani.

It is certain, Lord Princes, that when there are such lands there should be profitable things without number; but I tarried not in any harbor, because I sought to see the most countries that I could, to give the story of them to Your Highnesses.

Journal of the First Voyage,
November 27, 1492

And I say that Your Highnesses ought not to consent that any foreigner does business or sets foot here, except Christian Catholics, since this was the end and the beginning of the enterprise, that it should be for the enhancement and glory of the Christian religion, nor should anyone who is not a good Christian come to these parts.¹

Ib.

The Admiral ordered the lord to be given some things, and he and all his folk rested in great contentment, believing truly that they had come from the sky, and to see the Christians they held themselves very fortunate.

Ib. December 22, 1492

I declared to Your Highnesses that all the gain of this my Enterprise should be spent in the conquest of Jerusalem; and Your Highnesses smiled and said that it pleased you, and that even without this you had that strong desire.

"Of this voyage, I observe," says the Admiral, "that it has miraculously been shown, as may be understood by this writing, by the many signal miracles that He has shown on the voyage, and for me, who for so great a time was in the court of Your Highnesses with the opposition and against the opinion of so many high personages of your household, who were all against me, alleging this undertaking to be folly, which I hope in Our Lord will be to the greater glory of Christianity, which to some slight extent already has happened."

Ib. March 15, 1493

All are most beautiful, of a thousand shapes, and all accessible, and filled with trees of a thousand kinds and tall, and they seem to touch the sky; and I am told that they never lose their foliage, which I can believe, for I saw them as green and beautiful as they are in Spain.

*Letter to the Sovereigns on the First Voyage, February 15-

It is true that after they have been reassured and have lost this fear, they are so artless and so free with all they possess, that no one would believe it without having seen it. Of anything they have, if you ask them for it, they never say no; rather they invite the person to share it, and show as much love as if they were giving their hearts.

Ib.

And they know neither sect nor idolatry, with the exception that all believe that the source of all power and goodness is in the sky, and they believe very firmly that I, with these ships and people, came from the sky, and in this belief they everywhere received me, after they had overcome their fear.

I should be judged as a captain who went from Spain to the Indies to conquer a people numerous and warlike, whose manners and religion are very different from ours, who live in sierras and mountains, without fixed settlements, and where by divine will I have placed under the sovereignty of the King and Queen our Lords, an Other World, whereby Spain, which was reckoned poor, is become the richest of countries.

² Columbus is coming from the Indies as a prisoner to Cadiz.

The tempest was terrible and separated me from my [other] vessels that night, putting every one of them in desperate straits, with nothing to look forward to but death. Each was certain the others had been destroyed. What man ever born, not excepting Job, who would not have died of despair, when in such weather seeking safety for my son, my brother, shipmates, and myself, we were forbidden [access to] the land and the harbors which I, by God's will and sweating blood, had won for Spain?

I came to serve you at the age of 28 and now I have not a hair on me that is not white, and my body is infirm and exhausted. All that was left to me and my brothers has been taken away and sold, even to the cloak that I wore, without hearing or trial, to my great dishonor.

Ib.

Weep for me, whoever has charity, truth and justice! I did not come on this voyage for gain, honor or wealth, that is certain; for then the hope of all such things was dead. I came to Your Highnesses with honest purpose and sincere zeal; and I do not lie. I humbly beseech Your Highnesses that, if it please God to remove me hence, you will help me to go to Rome and on other pilgrimages.

The noble history of the Sangreal,¹ and of the most renowned Christian king, first and chief of the three best Christian and worthy, King Arthur, which ought most to be remembered among us English men tofore all other Christian kings. For it is notoriously known through the universal world that there be nine worthy and the best that ever were. That is to wit three paynims, three Jews, and three Christian men. As for the paynims they were . . . the first Hector of Troy . . . the second Alexander the Great; and the third Julius Caesar. . . . And as for the three Jews . . . the first was Duke Joshua . . . the second David . . . and the third Judas Maccabaeus . . . And sith the said Incarnation have been three noble Christian men . . . of whom was first the noble Arthur. . . . The second was Charlemagne . . . and the third and last was Godfrey of Bouillon.

And with that the king saw coming toward him the strangest beast that ever he saw or heard of; so the beast went to the well and drank, and the noise was in the beast's belly like unto the questing of thirty couple hounds; but all the while the beast drank there was no noise in the beast's belly: and therewith the beast departed with a great noise, whereof the king had great marvel. . . . Pellinore, that time king, followed the questing beast.

The month of May was come, when every lusty heart beginneth to blossom, and to bring forth fruit; for like as herbs and trees bring forth fruit and flourish in May, in likewise every lusty heart that is in any manner a lover, springeth and flourisheth in lusty deeds. For it giveth unto all lovers courage, that lusty month of May.

Ib. XVIII, 25

Wherefore I liken love nowadays unto summer and winter; for like as the one is hot and the other cold, so fareth love nowadays; therefore all ye that be lovers call unto your remembrance the month of May, like as did Queen Guenever, for whom I make here a little mention, that while she lived she was a true lover, and therefore she had a good end.

*Le Morte d' Arthur,
bk. XVIII, ch. 25*

And therefore, said the king, wit you well my heart was never so heavy as it is now, and much more I am sorrier for my good knights' loss than for the loss of my fair queen; for queens I might have enow, but such a fellowship of good knights shall never be together in no company.

Ib. XX, 9

I shall curse you with book and bell and candle.¹

Ib. XXI, 1

The Prince,¹ ch. 6

From this arises the question whether it is better to be loved rather than feared, or feared rather than loved. It might perhaps be answered that we should wish to be both: but since love and fear can hardly exist together, if we must choose between them, it is far safer to be feared than loved.² Ib. 8

The chief foundations of all states, new as well as old or composite, are good laws and good arms; and as there cannot be good laws where the state is not well armed, it follows that where they are well armed they have good laws. Ib. 12

A prince should therefore have no other aim or thought, nor take up any other thing for his study, but war and its organization and discipline, for that is the only art that is necessary to one who commands. Ib. 14

Among other evils which being unarmed brings you, it causes you to be despised. Ib.

But my intention being to write something of use to those who understand, it appears to me more proper to go to the real truth of the matter than to its imagination; and many have imagined republics and principalities which have never been seen or known to exist in reality; for how we live is so far removed from how we ought to live, that he who abandons what is done for what ought to be done, will rather bring about his own ruin than his preservation. Ib. 15

The prince who relies upon their words, without having otherwise provided for his security, is ruined; for friendships that are won by awards, and not by greatness and nobility of soul, although deserved, yet are not real, and cannot be depended upon in time of adversity. The Prince, ch. 17

A prince being thus obliged to know well how to act as a beast must imitate the fox and the lion, for the lion cannot protect himself from traps, and the fox cannot defend himself from wolves. One must therefore be a fox to recognize traps, and a lion to frighten wolves. Ib.

When neither their property nor their honor is touched, the majority of men live content. Ib. 19

There are three classes of intellects: one which comprehends by itself; another which appreciates what others comprehend; and a third which neither comprehends by itself nor by the showing of others; the first is the most excellent, the second is good, the third is useless. Ib. 22

There is no other way of guarding oneself against flattery than by letting men understand that they will not offend you by speaking the truth; but when everyone can tell you the truth, you lose their respect. Ib. 23

Forget Not Yet

And wilt thou leave me thus?
 Say nay, say nay, for shame!

The Appeal

My lute, awake! perform the last
 Labor that thou and I shall waste,
 And end that I have now begun;
 For when this song is sung and past,
 My lute, be still, for I have done.

But rather April, wet by kind,
For love is full of showers.

Love's Servile Lot

As I in hoary winter night stood shivering in the snow,

Surprised was I with sudden heat which made my heart to glow;

And lifting up a fearful eye to view what fire was near

A pretty Babe all burning bright did in the air appear.

The Burning Babe [written
c. 1595]

With this he vanished out of sight, and swiftly shrunk away,

And straight I called unto mind that it was Christmas Day. Ib.

That thus so cleanly I myself can free.

¹ Translated by ANGEL FORES and MURIEL KITTEL. From Spanish Drama [1962].

Shake hands forever, cancel all our vows,

And when we meet at any time again,
Be it not seen in either of our brows
That we one jot of former love retain.
Now at the last gasp of love's latest breath,

When his pulse failing, Passion speechless lies,

When Faith is kneeling by his bed of death,

And Innocence is closing up his eyes,
Now if thou wouldst, when all have given him over,

From death to life thou might'st him yet recover.

GALILEO GALILEI

1564-1642

Philosophy is written in this grand book — I mean the universe — which stands continually open to our gaze, but it cannot be understood unless one first learns to comprehend the language and interpret the characters in which it is written. It is written in the language of mathematics, and its characters are triangles, circles, and other geometrical figures, without which it is humanly impossible to understand a single word of it; without these, one is wandering about in a dark labyrinth.

 13

And if the boy have not a woman's gift
 To rain a shower of commanded tears,
 An onion will do well for such a shift.
Ib. 124

No profit grows where is no pleasure
 ta'en;
 In brief, sir, study what you most affect. Act I, sc. i, l. 39

There's small choice in rotten apples. I, i, 137

To seek their fortunes further than at home,
 Where small experience grows. I, ii, 51

Nothing comes amiss, so money comes withal. I, ii, 82

And do as adversaries do in law, Strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends. I, ii, 281

I must dance barefoot on her wedding
 day,

And, for your love to her, lead apes in hell. II, i, 33

Asses are made to bear, and so are you.
II, i, 200

Kiss me, Kate, we will be married o'
 Sunday. II, i, 318

IV, i, 189

This is a way to kill a wife with kindness. IV, i, 211

Kindness in women, not their beauteous looks,
 Shall win my love. IV, ii, 41

Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor:
 For 'tis the mind that makes the body
 rich;

And as the sun breaks through the darkest clouds,
 So honor peereth in the meanest habit. IV, iii, 173

Forward, I pray, since we have come so far,

And be it moon, or sun, or what you please:

An if you please to call it a rush-candle,

Henceforth I vow it shall be so for me. IV, v, 12

He that is giddy thinks the world turns round. V, ii, 20

A woman mov'd is like a fountain troubled,

Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of beauty. V, ii, 143

Such duty as the subject owes the prince,

Even such a woman oweth to her husband. V, ii, 156

Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear.

V, ii, 715

A jest's prosperity lies in the ear Of him that hears it, never in the tongue

Of him that makes it.

V, ii, 869

When daisies pied and violets blue, And lady-smocks all silver-white, And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue

Do paint the meadows with delight, The cuckoo then, on every tree, Mocks married men; for thus sings he, Cuckoo;

Cuckoo, cuckoo: O word of fear, Unpleasing to a married ear.

V, ii, 902

When icicles hang by the wall, And Dick, the shepherd, blows his nail,

And Tom bears logs into the hall, And milk comes frozen home in pail,

When blood is nipp'd and ways be foul,

Then nightly sings the staring owl, Tu-who;

Tu-whit, tu-who — a merry note, While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

Romeo and Juliet II, ii, 100

Romeo: Lady, by yonder blessed moon
I swear

That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops —

Juliet: O! swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon,

That monthly changes in her circled
orb,

Lest that thy love prove likewise variable. II, ii, 107

Do not swear at all;

Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious
self,

Which is the god of my idolatry.
II, ii, 112

It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden;

Too like the lightning, which doth

Ere one can say it lightens.
II, ii, 118

This bud of love, by summer's ripening
breath,

May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet. II, ii, 121

Love goes toward love, as schoolboys from their books;

But love from love, toward school with heavy looks. II, ii, 156

O! for a falconer's voice,
To lure this tassel-gentle back again.
II, ii, 158

How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues
by night,

Like softest music to attending ears!
II, ii, 165

I would have thee gone;
And yet no further than a wanton's
bird,

Who lets it hop a little from her hand,
Like a poor prisoner in his twisted
gyves,

And with a silk thread plucks it back
again,

So loving-jealous of his liberty.

This happy breed of men, this little
world,

This precious stone set in the silver
sea,

Which serves it in the office of a wall,
Or as a moat defensive to a house,

Against the envy of less happier lands,
This blessed plot, this earth, this realm,

this England,

This nurse, this teeming womb of royal kings,

Fear'd by their breed and famous by their birth. II, i, 40

And nothing can we call our own but death,

And that small model of the barren earth

Which serves as paste and cover to our bones.

For God's sake, let us sit upon the ground

And tell sad stories of the death of kings:

How some have been depos'd, some slain in war,

Some haunted by the ghosts they have depos'd,

Some poison'd by their wives, some sleeping kill'd;

All murder'd: for within the hollow crown

That rounds the mortal temples of a king

Keeps Death his court.

I am slow of study.

Thorough bush, thorough brier,

Over park, over pale,

Thorough flood, thorough fire.

I must go seek some dew drops here,
And hang a pearl in every cowslip's ear.

II, i, 14

I am that merry wanderer of the night.
I jest to Oberon, and make him smile
When I a fat and bean-fed horse beguile,

Neighing in likeness of a filly foal:

And sometimes lurk I in a gossip's bowl,

In very likeness of a roasted crab.

II, i, 43

Since once I sat upon a promontory,
And heard a mermaid on a dolphin's back

Uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath,

That the rude sea grew civil at her song,

And certain stars shot madly from their spheres

To hear the sea-maid's music.

I know a bank whereon the wild thyme blows,

Where oxlips and the nodding violet grows

Quite over-canopied with luscious woodbine,

With sweet musk-roses, and with eglantine:

There sleeps Titania some time of the night,

Lull'd in these flowers with dances and delight;

And there the snake throws her enamell'd skin,

Weed wide enough to wrap a fairy in.

IV, ii, 44

The lunatic, the lover, and the poet,
Are of imagination all compact:

One sees more devils than vast hell can hold,

That is, the madman; the lover, all as frantic,

Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt:

The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling,
Doth glance from heaven to earth,
from earth to heaven;

And, as imagination bodies forth

The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen

Turns them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing

A local habitation and a name.

Such tricks hath strong imagination,
That, if it would but apprehend some

joy,

It comprehends some bringer of that
joy;

Or in the night, imagining some fear,
How easy is a bush suppos'd a bear!

The quality of mercy is not strain'd,
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven

Upon the place beneath: it is twice bless'd;

It blesseth him that gives and him that takes:

'Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes

The throned monarch better than his crown;

His scepter shows the force of temporal power,

The attribute to awe and majesty, Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;¹

But mercy is above this scepter'd sway,
It is enthroned in the hearts of kings,

It is an attribute to God himself,
And earthly power doth then show likest God's

When mercy seasons justice. Therefore,
Jew,

Though justice be thy plea, consider
this,

That in the course of justice, none of us

Should see salvation: we do pray for mercy,

And that same prayer doth teach us all to render

The deeds of mercy.

and e'er since

Sits on his horse back at mine hostess' door. II, i, 288

He is the half part of a blessed man, Left to be finished by such a she;

And she a fair divided excellence, Whose fullness of perfection lies in
him. II, i, 437

'Zounds! I was never so bethump'd

Commodity,

Commodity, the bias of the world.
II, i, 573

I will instruct my sorrows to be proud;
For grief is proud and makes his owner
stoop. III, i, 68

Thou wear a lion's hide! doff it for shame,

And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs. III, i, 128

The sun's o'ercast with blood: fair day, adieu!

Which is the side that I must go withal?

I am with both: each army hath a hand;

And in their rage, I having hold of both,

They whirl asunder and dismember
me. King John III, i, 326

Bell, book and candle shall not drive me back.¹ III, iii, 12

Look, who comes here! a grave unto a soul. III, iv, 17

Death, death: O, amiable lovely death!²
III, iv, 25

Grief fills the room up of my absent child,

Lies in his bed, walks up and down
with me,

Puts on his pretty looks, repeats his words,

Remembers me of all his gracious parts,

Stuffs out his vacant garments with his form. III, iv, 93

Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale,³ Vexing the dull ear of a drowsy man.
III, iv, 108

When Fortune means to men most good,

She looks upon them with a threatening eye.⁴ III, iv, 119

A scepter snatch'd with an unruly
hand

Must be as boisterously maintain'd as gain'd;

And he that stands upon a slippery place

Makes nice of no vile hold to stay him up. III, iv, 135

As quiet as a lamb. IV, i, 80

To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,

To smooth the ice, or add another hue Unto the rainbow, or with taper-light

death.

IV, ii, 104

Make haste; the better foot before.²

IV, ii, 170

Another lean unwash'd artificer.

IV, ii, 201

How oft the sight of means to do ill
deeds

Makes ill deeds done!

IV, ii, 219

Heaven take my soul, and England keep my bones!

IV, iii, 10

I am amaz'd, methinks, and lose my way

Among the thorns and dangers of this world.

IV, iii, 140

Unthread the rude eye of rebellion,
And welcome home again discarded faith.

V, iv, 11

The day shall not be up so soon as I,
To try the fair adventure of tomorrow.

V, v, 21

'Tis strange that death should sing.

I am the cygnet to this pale faint
swan,

Who chants a doleful hymn to his own death.³

King John V, vii, 41

This England never did, nor never shall,

Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror.

V, vii, 112

Come the three corners of the world in arms,

And we shall shock them. Nought shall make us rue,

If England to itself do rest but true.

V, vii, 116

So shaken as we are, so wan with care.

King Henry IV [1597-1598], Part I, act I, sc. i, l. 1

In those holy fields

Over whose acres walk'd those blessed feet

Which fourteen hundred years ago were nail'd

For our advantage on the bitter cross.

I, i, 24

Unless hours were cups of sack, and minutes capons, and clocks the tongues of bawds, and dials the signs of leaping houses, and the blessed sun himself a fair hot wench in flame-color'd taffeta, I see no reason why thou shouldst be so superfluous to demand the time of the day.

O! thou hast damnable iteration, and art indeed able to corrupt a saint.

I, ii, 101

Now am I, if a man should speak truly, little better than one of the wicked.

I, ii, 105

'Tis my vocation, Hal; 'tis no sin for a man to labor in his vocation.

I, ii, 116

There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee.

I, ii, 154

I know you all, and will a while uphold
The unyok'd humor of your idleness:
Yet herein will I imitate the sun,
Who doth permit the base contagious clouds

To smother up his beauty from the world,

That when he please again to be himself,

Being wanted, he may be more wonder'd at,

By breaking through the foul and ugly mists

Of vapors that did seem to strangle him.

If all the year were playing holidays,
To sport would be as tedious as to work.

I, ii, 217

You tread upon my patience.

I, iii, 4

Came there a certain lord, neat, and trimly dress'd,

Fresh as a bridegroom; and his chin
new-reap'd,

Show'd like a stubble-land at harvest-
home.

He was perfumed like a milliner,
And 'twixt his finger and his thumb he held

A pouncet-box, which ever and anon
He gave his nose and took 't away again.

I, iii, 33

And as the soldiers bore dead bodies by.

He call'd them untaught knaves, unmannerly,

To bring a slovenly unhandsome corpse
Betwixt the wind and his nobility.

Henry IV, Part I, I, iii, 42

So pester'd with a popinjay.

I, iii, 50

God save the mark!

I, iii, 56

And but for these vile guns,
He would himself have been a soldier.

I, iii, 63

To put down Richard, that sweet lovely rose,

And plant this thorn, this canker, Bolingbroke.

I, iii, 176

Sink or swim.

I, iii, 194

O! the blood more stirs
To rouse a lion than to start a hare!

I, iii, 197

By heaven methinks it were an easy leap

To pluck bright honor from the palefac'd moon,

Or dive into the bottom of the deep,
Where fathom-line could never touch

the ground,

And pluck up drowned honor by the locks.

I, iii, 201

Why, what a candy deal of courtesy
This fawning greyhound then did proffer me!

I, iii, 251

I know a trick worth two of that.

II, i, 40

If the rascal have not given me medicines to make me love him, I'll be

II, iii, 26

Constant you are,
But yet a woman: and for secrecy,
No lady closer; for I well believe Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not know;

And so far will I trust thee, gentle Kate.

II, iii, 113

A plague of all cowards, I say.

II, iv, 129

There live not three good men unchanged in England, and one of them is fat and grows old.

II, iv, 146

You care not who sees your back: call you that backing of your friends? A plague upon such backing!

II, iv, 168

I have peppered two of them. . . . I tell thee what, Hal, if I tell thee a lie, spit in my face; call me horse.

II, iv, 216

that father ruffian, that vanity in years.

Henry IV, Part I, II, iv, 505

If sack and sugar be a fault, God help the wicked! If to be old and merry be a sin, then many an old host that I

Honor pricks me on. Yea, but how if honor prick me off when I come on?
how then? Can honor set to a leg? No.
Or an arm? No. Or take away the grief of a wound? No. Honor hath no skill in surgery, then? No. What is honor? a word. What is that word, honor? Air. A trim reckoning! Who hath it? he that died o' Wednesday. Doth he feel it?
No. Doth he hear it? No. It is insensible then? Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? No. Why? Detraction will not suffer it. Therefore I'll none of it: honor is a mere scutcheon;
and so ends my catechism. V, i, 131

Suspicion all our lives shall be stuck full cleanly.

V, iv, 168

Rumor is a pipe
Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures,

And of so easy and so plain a stop
That the blunt monster with uncounted heads,

The still-discordant wavering multitude,²

We are in God's hand. III, vi, 181

That island of England breeds very valiant creatures: their mastiffs are of unmatched courage. III, vii, 155

Give them great meals of beef and iron and steel, they will eat like wolves and fight like devils. III, vii, 166

The hum of either army stilly sounds,
That the fix'd sentinels almost receive
The secret whispers of each other's watch:

Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames

Each battle sees the other's umber'd face:

Steed threatens steed, in high and boastful neighs

Piercing the night's dull ear; and from the tents

The armorers, accomplishing the knights,

With busy hammers closing rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation.

IV, Chorus, 5

A little touch of Harry in the night.
Henry V, IV, Chorus, 47

There is some soul of goodness in things evil,
Would men observingly distill it out. IV, i, 4

Every subject's duty is the king's; but every subject's soul is his own. IV, i, 189

What infinite heart's ease
Must kings neglect that private men enjoy!

And what have kings that privates have not too,

Save ceremony, save general ceremony?

And what art thou, thou idol¹ ceremony?

What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more

Of mortal griefs than do thy worshippers?

What are thy rents? what are thy comings-in?

O ceremony! show me but thy worth. IV, i, 256

'Tis not the balm, the scepter and the ball,

The sword, the mace, the crown imperial,

The intertissued robe of gold and pearl,

The farced title running 'fore the king,
The throne he sits on, nor the tide of pomp

That beats upon the high shore of this

world,
No, not all these, thrice-gorgeous ceremony,

Not all these, laid in bed majestical,
Can sleep so soundly as the wretched slave,

Who with a body fill'd and vacant mind

Gets him to rest, cramm'd with distressful bread. IV, i, 280

The world's a theatre, the earth a stage,
Which God and Nature do with actors fill.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Apology for Actors
[1612]

They have their exits and their entrances;
 And one man in his time plays many parts,
 His acts being seven ages. At first the infant, Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms.
 And then the whining school-boy, with his satchel,
 And shining morning face, creeping like snail
 Unwillingly to school. And then the lover, Sighing like furnace, with a woful ballad
 Made to his mistress' eyebrow. Then a soldier,
 Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the pard,
 Jealous in honor, sudden and quick in quarrel,
 Seeking the bubble reputation
 Even in the cannon's mouth. And then the justice,
 In fair round belly with good capon lin'd,
 With eyes severe and beard of formal cut,
 Full of wise saws and modern instances;
 And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts
 Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon,
 With spectacles on nose and pouch on side,
 His youthful hose well sav'd, a world too wide
 For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice,
 Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
 And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all,
 That ends this strange eventful history,
 Is second childishness, and mere oblivion,

The world's a stage on which all the parts are played. — MIDDLETON, A Game of Chess [1624]. V, i

 Than lying, vainness, babbling drunkenness,
 Or any taint of vice whose strong corruption Inhabits our frail blood. III, iv, 390

Set honor in one eye and death i' the other,
 And I will look on both indifferently.
Julius Caesar I, ii, 86

Well, honor is the subject of my story.
 I cannot tell what you and other men Think of this life; but, for my single
 self,
 I had as lief not be as live to be
 In awe of such a thing as I myself.
 I, ii, 92

Stemming it with hearts of controversy. I, ii, 109

Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow
 world
 Like a Colossus; and we petty men Walk under his huge legs, and peep
 about
 To find ourselves dishonorable graves.
 Men at some time are masters of their fates:¹

The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
 But in ourselves, that we are underlings. I, ii, 134

Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed,
 That he is grown so great? I, ii, 148

Let me have men about me that are

 Sleek-headed men, and such as sleep o' nights.
 Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look;²

He thinks too much: such men are dangerous. I, ii, 191

He reads much;
 He is a great observer, and he looks
 Quite through the deeds of men.
 I, ii, 200

Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a

Even at noonday, upon the marketplace,
Hooting and shrieking. I, iii, 26

So every bondman in his own hand bears

The power to cancel his captivity.
I, iii, 101

O! he sits high in all the people's hearts:

And that which would appear offense in
us,

His countenance, like richest alchemy,
Will change to virtue and to worthiness. I, iii, 157

The abuse of greatness is when it dis-joins

Remorse from power. II, i, 18

'Tis a common proof,
That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,

Whereto the climber-upward turns his face;

But when he once attains the upmost round,

He then unto the ladder turns his back,

Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees

By which he did ascend. II, i, 21

Therefore think him as a serpent's egg
Which, hatch'd, would, as his kind,
grow mischievous,

And kill him in the shell. II, i, 32

Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is

Like a phantasma, or a hideous dream:
The genius and the mortal instruments

Are then in council; and the state of man,

Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Cowards die many times before their deaths;

The valiant never taste of death but once.

Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,

It seems to me most strange that men should fear;

Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come when it will come.

III, i, 273

Romans, countrymen, and lovers!

III, ii, 13

Not that I loved Caesar less, but that I loved Rome more.
III, ii, 22

As he was valiant, I honor him; but,
as he was ambitious, I slew him.
III, ii, 27

If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.
III, ii, 36

Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears;

I come to bury Caesar, not to praise him.

The good is oft interred with their bones.¹

Julius Caesar III, ii, 79

So are they all, all honorable men.
III, ii, 88

III, ii, 97

III, ii, 217

I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts:

I am no orator, as Brutus is;
But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man.

IV, iii, 96

There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to

What's Hecuba to him or he to Hecuba,
That he should weep for her?
II, ii, 593

Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across?

Plucks off my beard and blows it in my face?
II, ii, 607

But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gall
To make oppression bitter.
II, ii, 613

The play's the thing
Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king.
II, ii, 641

With devotion's visage
And pious action we do sugar o'er
The devil himself.
III, i, 47

To be, or not to be: that is the question:

Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer

The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,

Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,

And by opposing end them? To die: to sleep;

No more; and, by a sleep to say we end

The heartache and the thousand natural shocks

That flesh is heir to, 'tis a consummation

Devoutly to be wish'd. To die, to sleep;

To sleep: perchance to dream: ay, there's the rub;

For in that sleep of death what dreams may come,

When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause. There's the respect
That makes calamity of so long life;
For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,
The pangs of dispriz'd love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office, and the spurns
That patient merit of the unworthy
takes,
When he himself might his quietus make
With a bare bodkin? who would fardels bear,
To grunt and sweat under a weary life,
But that the dread of something after
death,
The undiscover'd country from whose bourn
No traveler returns,¹ puzzles the will,
And makes us rather bear those ills we have Than fly to others that we know not of?
Thus conscience does make cowards of us all;
And thus the native hue of resolution Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought,
And enterprises of great pith and moment
With this regard their currents turn awry,
And lose the name of action.

well enough; God has given you one face, and you make yourselves another.

III, i, 150

O! what a noble mind is here o'er-thrown:

The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's, eye, tongue, sword. III, i, 159

The glass of fashion and the mould of form,

The observ'd of all observers!

III, i, 162

Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,

Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh. III, i, 166

O! woe is me,

To have seen what I have seen, see what I see! III, i, 169

Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue; but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus;
but use all gently: for in the very torrent, tempest, and — as I may say — whirlwind of passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance, that may give it smoothness. O! it offends me to the soul to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings, who for the most part are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb-shows and noise: I would have such a fellow whipped for o'erdoing Termagant; it out-herods Herod. III, ii, 1

Suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature. III, ii, 20

They are not a pipe for fortune's finger To sound what stop she please. Give me that man
That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him
In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart.
As I do thee. Something too much of this. III, ii, 75

Like a remorseful pardon slowly carried. V, iii, 57

All impediments in fancy's course
Are motives of more fancy. V, iii, 216

Spirits are not finely touch'd
But to fine issues.

When nights are longest there.
II, i, 144

His face is the worst thing about
him. II, i, 167

Condemn the fault, and not the act of it? II, ii, 37

No ceremony that to great ones 'longs,
Not the king's crown, nor the deputed sword,

The marshal's truncheon, nor the judge's robe,
Become them with one half so good a grace

As mercy does.¹ II, ii, 59

Why, all the souls that were were forfeit once;

And He that might the vantage best have took,

Found out the remedy. How would you be,

If He, which is the top of judgment, should

But judge you as you are? II, ii, 73

The law hath not been dead, though it hath slept. II, ii, 90

O! it is excellent
To have a giant's strength; but it is tyrannous

To use it like a giant. II, ii, 107 stanza:

Hide, O hide those hills of snow,

Which thy frozen bosom bears,

On whose tops the pinks that grow

Are of those that April wears!

But first set my poor heart free,

Bound in those icy chains by thee.

Music oft hath such a charm
To make bad good, and good provoke to harm.¹

III, iii, 131

Good name in man and woman, dear my lord,

Is the immediate jewel of their souls: Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something, nothing;

'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;

But he that filches from me my good name

Robs me of that which not enriches him,

And makes me poor indeed.

III, iii, 155

O! beware, my lord, of jealousy; It is the green-ey'd monster which doth mock

The meat it feeds on; that cuckold lives in bliss

Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger;

But, O! what damned minutes tells he o'er

Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet soundly loves!

III, iii, 165

Poor and content is rich, and rich enough.

Othello III, iii, 172

Think'st thou I'd make a life of jealousy,

To follow still the changes of the moon

With fresh suspicions? No; to be once in doubt

Is once to be resolved.

III, iii, 177

I humbly do beseech you of your pardon

For too much loving you.

III, iii, 212

If I do prove her haggard, Though that her jesses were my dear heart-strings,

But this denoted a foregone conclusion. III, iii, 429

Swell, bosom, with thy fraught,
For 'tis of aspics' tongues!
III, iii, 450

Like to the Pontick sea, Whose icy current and compulsive course

Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on

To the Propontic and the Hellespont, Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace,

Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love,

Till that a capable and wide revenge
Swallow them up. III, iii, 454

Our new heraldry is hands not hearts.
III, iv, 48

But jealous souls will not be answer'd
so;

They are not ever jealous for the

For naught I did in hate, but all in honor. Othello V, ii, 293

I have done the state some service, and they know 't;

No more of that. I pray you, in your letters,

When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,

Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate,

Nor set down aught in malice: then, must you speak

Of one that lov'd not wisely but too well;

Of one not easily jealous, but, being wrought,

Perplex'd in the extreme; of one whose hand,

Like the base Indian, threw a pearl away

Richer than all his tribe; of one whose subdu'd eyes

Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their med'cinable gum. V, ii, 338 day.¹

O! that way madness lies; let me shun that.

King Lear III, iv, 21

Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,

That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm,

How shall your houseless heads and un-
fed sides,

Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you

From seasons such as these?

III, iv, 28

Take physic, pomp;
Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel.

III, iv, 33

Pillicock sat on Pillicock-hill:

Halloo, halloo, loo, loo!

III, iv, 75

Out-paramoured the Turk.

III, iv, 91

Is man no more than this? Consider him well. Thou owest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume. Ha! here's three on 's are sophisticated; thou art the thing itself; unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art. Off, off, you lendings! Come; unbutton here.

III, iv, 105

'Tis a naughty night to swim in.

III, iv, 113

The green mantle of the standing pool.

III, iv, 137

But mice and rats and such small deer
Have been Tom's food for seven long year.

III, iv, 142

The prince of darkness is a gentleman.¹

III, iv, 147

Poor Tom's a-cold.

His word was still, Fie, foh, and fum,
I smell the blood of a British man.

King Lear III, iv, 185

He's mad that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's oath. III, vi, 20

The little dogs and all, Tray, Blanch, and Sweetheart, see, they bark at me. III, vi, 65

Is there any cause in nature that makes these hard hearts? III, vi, 81

I am tied to the stake, and I must stand the course. III, vii, 54

Out, vile jelly! III, vii, 83

The lowest and most dejected thing of fortune. IV, i, 3

The worst is not,
So long as we can say, "This is the worst." IV, i, 27

As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods;
They kill us for their sport. IV, i, 36

You are not worth the dust which the rude wind
Blows in your face. IV, ii, 30

She that herself will sliver and dis-branch
From her material sap, perforce must wither
And come to deadly use. IV, ii, 34

Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile;
Filths savor but themselves. IV, ii, 38

Tigers, not daughters. IV, ii, 39

It is the stars,
The stars above us, govern our conditions. IV, iii, 34

Our foster-nurse of nature is repose.
IV, iv, 12

How fearful
And dizzy 'tis to cast one's eyes so low!
The crows and choughs that wing the midway air

Show scarce so gross as beetles; halfway down

Hangs one that gathers samphire, dreadful trade!

Methinks he seems no bigger than his head.

The fishermen that walk upon the beach

Appear like mice, and yond tall anchoring bark

Diminish'd to her cock, her cock a buoy

Almost too small for sight. The murmuring surge,

That on the unnumber'd idle pebbles
chafes,

Cannot be heard so high.
King Lear IV, vi, 12

Nature's above art in that respect.
IV, vi, 87

Ay, every inch a king. IV, vi, 110

The wren goes to 't, and the small gilded fly

Does lecher in my sight.
Let copulation thrive. IV, vi, 115

Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination. IV, vi, 133

A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears: see how yond justice rails upon yon simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: change places;
and, handy-dandy, which is the justice,
which is the thief? IV, vi, 154

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;

Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin with gold,

And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks;

Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw does pierce it. IV, vi, 169

Get thee glass eyes;
And, like a scurvy politician, seem
To see the things thou dost not.
IV, vi, 175

When we are born, we cry that we are come

To this great stage of fools.
King Lear IV, vi, 187

Then, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill!
 IV, vi, 192

Mine enemy's dog, Though he had bit me, should have stood that night Against my fire. IV, vii, 36

'Thou art a soul in bliss; but I am bound Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
 Do scald like molten lead.
 IV, vii, 46

I am a very foolish fond old man, Fourscore and upward, not an hour
 more or less;
 And, to deal plainly,
 I fear I am not in my perfect mind.
 IV, vii, 60

Pray you now, forget and forgive.¹
 IV, vii, 84

Men must endure
 Their going hence, even as their coming hither:
 Ripeness is all. V, ii, 9

Come, let's away to prison;
 We two alone will sing like birds i' the cage:
 When thou dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel down,
 And ask of thee forgiveness: so we'll live,
 And pray, and sing, and tell old tales,
 and laugh
 At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues
 Talk of court news; and we'll talk with them too,
 Who loses and who wins; who's in,
 who's out;
 And take upon's the mystery of things,
 As if we were God's spies: and we'll wear out,
 In a wall'd prison, packs and sets of great ones

¹ All our great fray . . . is forgiven and forgotten between us quite. — HEYWOOD, Proverbs [1546], pt. II, ch. 3

That ebb and flow by the moon.
King Lear V, iii, 8

Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia,
 The gods themselves throw incense.
 V, iii, 20

The gods are just, and of our pleasant
 vices
 Make instruments to plague us.
 V, iii, 172

The wheel is come full circle.
 V, iii, 176

Howl, howl, howl, howl! O! you are men of stones:
 Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so
 That heaven's vaults should crack.
 She's gone forever. V, iii, 259

Her voice was ever soft, Gentle, and low, an excellent thing in woman. V, iii, 274

And my poor fool is hang'd! No, no, no life!
 Why should a dog, a horse, a rat, have
 life,
 And thou no breath at all? Thou'lt come no more,
 Never, never, never, never, never!
 Pray you, undo this button.
 V, iii, 307

Vex not his ghost: O! let him pass; he hates him
 That would upon the rack of this tough
 world
 Stretch him out longer. V, iii, 315

The weight of this sad time we must obey;
 Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say.
 The oldest hath borne most: we that are young,
 Shall never see so much, nor live so long. V, iii, 325

First Witch: When shall we three meet again
 In thunder, lightning, or in rain?
Second Witch: When the hurlyburly's
 done,

When the battle's lost and won.
Macbeth [1605-1606], act I, sc. i, l. 1

Fair is foul, and foul is fair:
 Hover through the fog and filthy air.
I, i, 12

Banners flout the sky. I, ii, 50

A sailor's wife had chestnuts in her lap,
 And munch'd, and munch'd, and munch'd: "Give me," quoth I:
 "Aroint thee, witch!" the rump-fed ronyon cries. I, iii, 4

Sleep shall neither night nor day
 Hang upon his pent-house lid.
I, iii, 19

Dwindle, peak, and pine. I, iii, 23

So foul and fair a day I have not seen.
I, iii, 38

If you can look into the seeds of time,
 And say which grain will grow and which will not,
 Speak. I, iii, 58

And to be king Stands not within the prospect of belief. I, iii, 73

The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,
 And these are of them. I, iii, 79

Or have we eaten on the insane root
 That takes the reason prisoner?
I, iii, 84

And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,
 The instruments of darkness tell us truths,
 Win us with honest trifles, to betray 's
 In deepest consequence. I, iii, 123

As happy prologues to the swelling act
 Of the imperial theme. I, iii, 128

I am Thane of Cawdör:
 If good, why do I yield to that suggestion
 Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair

And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,
 Against the use of nature? Present fears
 Are less than horrible imaginings.

Macbeth I, iii, 134

If chance will have me king, why, chance may crown me,
 Without my stir. I, iii, 143

Come what come may,
 Time and the hour runs through the roughest day. I, iii, 146

Nothing in his life
 Became him like the leaving it; he died
 As one that had been studied in his death

To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd,
 As 'twere a careless trifle. I, iv, 7

There's no art
 To find the mind's construction in the face:
 He was a gentleman on whom I built
 An absolute trust. I, iv, 11

Glamis thou art, and Cawdor; and shalt
 be

What thou art promis'd. Yet do I fear thy nature;
 It is too full o' the milk of human kindness¹

To catch the nearest way. I, v, 16

The raven himself is hoarse
 That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan

Under my battlements. Come, you spirits

That tend on mortal thoughts! unsex me here,

And fill me from the crown to the toe top full

Of direst cruelty; make thick my blood,

Stop up the access and passage to remorse,

 ture

 milk of human kindness in my heart. — RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN, The Rivals [1775], act III,
 sc. iv

Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between
The effect and it! Come to my woman's breasts,
And take my milk for gall, you murdering ministers.

Macbeth I, v, 38

Nor heaven peep through the blanket of the dark,
To cry, "Hold, hold!"

I, v, 54

Your face, my thane, is as a book where men
May read strange matters.

I, v, 63

Look like the innocent flower,
But be the serpent under 't.

I, v, 66

Duncan: This castle hath a pleasant seat; the air

Nimbly and sweetly recommends itself
Unto our gentle senses.

Banquo: This guest of summer,
The temple-haunting martlet, does approve

By his lov'd mansionry that the heaven's breath

Smells wooingly here: no jutty, frieze, Buttress, nor coign of vantage, but this bird

Hath made his pendent bed and procreant cradle:

Where they most breed and haunt, I have observed

The air is delicate.

I, vi, 1

If it were done when 'tis done, then
'twere well

It were done quickly; if the assassination

Could trammel up the consequence, and catch

With his surcease success; that but this blow

Might be the be-all and the end-all here,

But here, upon this bank and shoal of
time,

We'd jump the life to come.

I, vii, 1

This even-handed justice.

I, vii, 10

Besides, this Duncan Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been

So clear in his great office, that his virtues

Will plead like angels trumpet-tongu'd¹ against

The deep damnation of his taking-off;
And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubin, hors'd

Upon the sightless couriers of the air, Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,

That tears shall drown the wind. I have no spur

To prick the sides of my intent, but only

Vaulting ambition, which o'erleaps itself

And falls on the other.

Macbeth I, vii, 16

I have bought Golden opinions from all sorts of people.

I, vii, 32

Letting "I dare not" wait upon "I would,"

Like the poor cat i' the adage.²

I, vii, 44

I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more is none.

I, vii, 46

Nor time nor place
Did then adhere.

I, vii, 51

I have given suck, and know How tender 'tis to love the babe that milks me:

I would, while it was smiling in my
face,

Have pluck'd my nipple from his boneless gums,

And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn as you

Have done to this.

place,

Macbeth I, vii, 59

Memory, the warder of the brain.
I, vii, 65

Away, and mock the time with fairest show:

False face must hide what the false heart doth know. I, vii, 81

The moon is down. II, i, 2

There's husbandry in heaven;
Their candles are all out. II, i, 4

Merciful powers!
Restrain in me the cursed thoughts that nature

Gives way to in repose. II, i, 7

Shut up
In measureless content. II, i, 16

Is this a dagger which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand? Come,
let me clutch thee:

I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible
To feeling as to sight? or art thou but
A dagger of the mind, a false creation, Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain? II, i, 33

Now o'er the one half-world Nature seems dead; and wicked dreams abuse

The curtain'd sleep; witchcraft celebrates

Pale Hecate's offerings. II, i, 49

Thou sure and firm-set earth, Hear not my steps, which way they walk, for fear

The very stones prate of my where-about.¹ II, i, 56

The bell invites me.
Hear it not, Duncan; for it is a knell That summons thee to heaven or to hell. II, i, 62

bellman,

My father as he slept I had done 't.
II, ii, 14

I had most need of blessing, and
"Amen"

Stuck in my throat. II, ii, 33

Methought I heard a voice cry, "Sleep
no more!

Macbeth does murder sleep!" the innocent sleep,

Sleep that knits up the ravel'd sleeve of care,

The death of each day's life, sore labor's bath,

Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course,

Chief nourisher in life's feast.
II, ii, 36

Glamis hath murder'd sleep, and therefore Cawdor

Shall sleep no more, Macbeth shall sleep no more! II, ii, 43

Infirm of purpose!
Give me the daggers. The sleeping and the dead

Are but as pictures; 'tis the eye of childhood

That fears a painted devil. II, ii, 53

Will all great Neptune's ocean wash
this blood

Clean from my hand? No, this my hand will rather

The multitudinous seas incarnadine, Making the green one red.

piece!

ope

thence

The life o' the building!

Macbeth II, iii, 72

Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit.¹

II, iii, 83

Had I but died an hour before this chance

I had liv'd a blessed time; for, from this instant,

There's nothing serious in mortality,

All is but toys; renown and grace is dead,

The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees

Is left this vault to brag of.

II, iii, 98

Who can be wise, amaz'd, temperate and furious,

Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man.

II, iii, 115

In the great hand of God I stand, and thence

Against the undivulg'd pretense I fight
Of treasonous malice.

II, iii, 137

To show an unfelt sorrow is an office
Which the false man does easy.

II, iii, 143

A falcon, towering in her pride of place,

Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at and kill'd.

II, iv, 12

I must become a borrower of the night
For a dark hour or twain.

III, i, 27

To be thus is nothing;

But to be safely thus.

III, i, 48

Murderer: We are men, my liege.

Macbeth: Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men.

III, i, 91

I am one, my liege,

Whom the vile blows and buffets of the
world

Have so incens'd that I am reckless what

I do to spite the world.

Macbeth III, i, 108

So weary with disasters, tugg'd with fortune,

That I would set my life on any chance,

To mend it or be rid on 't.

III, i, 112

Things without all remedy
Should be without regard: what's done is done.

III, ii, 11

We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it.

III, ii, 13

Duncan is in his grave;
After life's fitful fever he sleeps well;
Treason has done his worst: nor steel,
nor poison,

Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing
Can touch him further.

III, ii, 22

Then be thou jocund. Ere the bat hath flown

His cloister'd flight, ere, to black Hecate's summons

The shard-borne beetle with his drowsy hums

Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be done

A deed of dreadful note.

III, ii, 40

Come, seeling night,
Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day,
And with thy bloody and invisible
hand

Cancel and tear to pieces that great bond

Which keeps me pale! Light thickens, and the crow

Makes wing to the rooky wood.

III, ii, 46

Now spurs the lated traveler apace
To gain the timely inn.

III, iii, 6

But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confined, bound in

To saucy doubts and fears.

tiger,

Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves

Shall never tremble. III, iv, 99

Hence, horrible shadow!

Unreal mockery, hence! III, iv, 106

Stand not upon the order of your going,

But go at once. III, iv, 119

It will have blood, they say; blood will have blood:

Stones have been known to move and trees to speak. III, iv, 122

Macbeth: What is the night?

Lady Macbeth: Almost at odds with morning, which is which.

III, iv, 126

I am in blood

Stepp'd in so far, that, should I wade
no more,

Returning were as tedious as go o'er.
III, iv, 136

Double, double toil and trouble;

Fire burn and cauldron bubble.
IV, i, 10

Eye of newt, and toe of frog,

Wool of bat, and tongue of dog.
IV, i, 14

Finger of birth-strangled babe,

Ditch-deliver'd by a drab. IV, i, 30

Macbeth IV, i, 49

Be bloody, bold, and resolute; laugh to scorn

The power of man, for none of woman
born

But yet I'll make assurance double sure,

And take a bond of fate. IV, i, 83

Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be until brightest fell. IV, iii, 22

Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,

Uproar the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth. IV, iii, 98

Give sorrow words; the grief that does not speak

Whispers the o'er-fraught heart and bids it break. IV, iii, 209

All my pretty ones?

Did you say all? O hell-kite! All?

What! all my pretty chickens and their dam

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-fac'd loon

Where gott'st thou that goose look?

V, iii, 11

Thou lily-liver'd boy.

V, iii, 15

I have liv'd long enough: my way of life

Is fall'n into the sere, the yellow leaf; 1

And that which should accompany old age,

As honor, love, obedience, troops of friends,

I must not look to have; but, in their stead,

Curses, not loud but deep, mouth-honor, breath,

Which the poor heart would fain deny,

Tomorrow, and tomorrow, and tomorrow,

Into a strumpet's fool.

Antony and Cleopatra [1606-
1607], act I, sc. 2, l. 12

There's beggary in the love that can be reckon'd. I, i, 15

Let Rome in Tiber melt, and the wide arch

Of the rang'd empire fall! Here is my space.

Kingdoms are clay. I, i, 33

In nature's infinite book of secrecy

A little I can read. I, ii, 11

I love long life better than figs.
I, ii, 34

On the sudden

A Roman thought hath struck him.
I, ii, 90

Eternity was in our lips and eyes,
Bliss in our brows bent. I, iii, 35

O! my oblivion is a very Antony,
And I am all forgotten. I, iii, 90

Give me to drink mandragora.¹ . . .
That I might sleep out this great gap of time

My Antony is away. I, v, 4

O happy horse, to bear the weight of Antony! I, v, 21

The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm

And burget of men.

Antony and Cleopatra I, v, 23

Where's my serpent of old Nile?
I, v, 25

A morsel for a monarch. I, v, 31

My salad days,

When I was green in judgment.
I, v, 73

We, ignorant of ourselves,

Beg often our own harms, which the wise powers

Deny us for our good; so find we profit
By losing of our prayers. II, i, 5

Epicurean cooks

Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite. II, i, 24

No worse a husband than the best of men. II, ii, 135

The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne,

Burn'd on the water; the poop was beaten gold,

Purple the sails, and so perfumed, that
The winds were love-sick with them;
the oars were silver,

Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made

The water which they beat to follow faster,

As amorous of their strokes. For her own person,

It beggar'd all description.
II, ii, 199

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale

Her infinite variety; other women cloy
The appetites they feed, but she makes hungry

Where most she satisfies; for vilest
things

Become themselves in her, that the holy priests

Bless her when she is riggish.
II, ii, 243

I have not kept my square; but that to come

Shall all be done by the rule.

Antony and Cleopatra II, iii, 6

Music, moody food

Of us that trade in love.¹ II, v, 1

Though it be honest, it is never good
To bring bad news.² II, v, 85

Come, thou monarch of the vine,
Plumpy Bacchus, with pink eyne!
II, vii, 120

Ambition,
The soldier's virtue. III, i, 22

Celerity is never more admir'd
Than by the negligent. III, vii, 24

We have kiss'd away
Kingdoms and provinces.
III, viii, 17

He wears the rose
Of youth upon him. III, xi, 20

Men's judgments are A parcel of their fortunes, and things outward
Do draw the inward quality after
them,
To suffer all alike. III, xi, 31

I found you as a morsel, cold upon Dead Caesar's Trencher.
III, xi, 116

Let's have one other gaudy night.
III, xi, 182

Now he'll outstare the lightning. To be furious
Is to be frightened out of fear.
III, xi, 194

To business that we love we rise be-
time,
And go to 't with delight.
IV, iv, 20

O infinite virtue! com'st thou smiling from
The world's great snare uncaught?
IV, viii, 17

The shirt of Nessus is upon me.

Sometimes we see a cloud that's dragonish;

A vapor sometime like a bear or lion,
A tower'd citadel, a pendant rock,
A forked mountain, or blue promontory

With trees upon 't.¹
Antony and Cleopatra IV, xii, 2

Unarm, Eros; the long day's task is done,
And we must sleep. IV, xii, 35

But I will be
A bridegroom in my death, and run into 't
As to a lover's bed. IV, xii, 99

O sun!
Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in;
darkling stand
The varying shore ² o' the world.
IV, xiii, 10

I am dying, Egypt, dying; only
I here importune death awhile, until
Of many thousand kisses the poor last
I lay upon thy lips. IV, xiii, 18

O! wither'd is the garland of the war,
The soldier's pole is fall'n; young boys and girls
Are level now with men; the odds is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable Beneath the visiting moon.
IV, xiii, 64

Let's do it after the high Roman fashion,
And make death proud to take us.
IV, xiii, 87

And it is great
To do that thing that ends all other
deeds,
Which shackles accidents, and bolts up change. V, ii, 4

His legs bestrid the ocean; his rear'd
arm

Crested the world; his voice was propertied

As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends;

ii, 400, p. 263b.

² In some editions, star.

But when he meant to quail and shake
the orb,
He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,

There was no winter in 't, an autumn
'twas

That grew the more by reaping; his delights

Were dolphin-like, they show'd his back above

The element they liv'd in; in his livery Walk'd crowns and crownets, realms and islands were

As plates dropp'd from his pocket.

Antony and Cleopatra V, ii, 82

The bright day is done,
And we are for the dark. V, ii, 192

Antony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see

Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness

I' the posture of a whore. V, ii, 217

A woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not. V, ii, 274

I have Immortal longings in me. V, ii, 282

If thou and nature can so gently part,
The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch,

Which hurts, and is desir'd.

V, ii, 296

Dost thou not see my baby at my breast,

That sucks the nurse asleep?

V, ii, 311

Now boast thee, death, in thy possession lies

A lass unparallel'd. V, ii, 317

First Guard: . . . Charmian, is this well done?

Charmian: It is well done, and fitting for a princess

Descended of so many royal kings.¹

V, ii, 327

¹ One of the soldiers seeing her, angrily said unto her: Is that well done Charmian? Very well said she again, and meet for a princess descended of so many noble kings. — SIR THOMAS NORTH, Plutarch's "Lives" [1579]

All the yarn she spun in Ulysses' absence did but fill Ithaca full of moths.

I, iii, 93

Nature teaches beasts to know their friends. II, i, 6

A cup of hot wine with not a drop of allaying Tiber in 't.¹ II, i, 52

My gracious silence, hail! II, i, 194

He himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude.² II, iii, 18

Bid them wash their faces,
And keep their teeth clean.

II, iii, 65

I thank you for your voices, thank you,
Your most sweet voices. II, iii, 179

The mutable, rank-scented many.

III, i, 65

Hear you this Triton of the minnows?
mark you

His absolute "shall"? III, i, 88

What is the city but the people?³

III, i, 198

His nature is too noble for the world:
He would not flatter Neptune for his trident,

Or Jove for 's power to thunder. His heart's his mouth:

What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent. III, i, 254

Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge!¹ Coriolanus V, iii, 44

Chaste as the icicle
That's curdied by the frost from purest snow,
And hangs on Dian's temple.

V, iii, 65

He wants nothing of a god but eternity and a heaven to throne in.

V, iv, 25

They'll give him death by inches.

V, iv, 43

If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there,

That, like an eagle in a dove-cote, I Flutter'd your Volsians in Corioli:

Alone I did it.

V, v, 114

Thou hast done a deed whereat valor will weep.

V, v, 135

He shall have a noble memory.

V, v, 155

'Tis not enough to help the feeble up,
But to support him after.

Timon of Athens [1607-1608],
act I, sc. i, l. 108

I call the gods to witness.²

I, i, 138

I wonder men dare trust themselves with men.

I, ii, 45

Here's that which is too weak to be a sinner,

Honest water, which ne'er left man i'
the mire.³

I, ii, 60

Sonnets ² [published 1609], 1, l. 1

² The sonnets were written definitely before 1598, according to Meres's Palladis Tamia, and according to Leslie Hotson in Mr. W. H. [1964].

When forty winters shall besiege thy brow,
 And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field. Sonnet 2, l. 1

Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee Calls back the lovely April of her prime. Sonnet 3, l. 9

Music to hear, why hear'st thou music
 sadly?
 Sweets with sweet war not, joy delights in joy. Sonnet 8, l. 1

Everything that grows Holds in perfection but a little moment. Sonnet 15, l. 1

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?

Thou art more lovely and more temperate:

Rough winds do shake the darling buds
 of May,

And summer's lease hath all too short a date. Sonnet 18, l. 1

But thy eternal summer shall not fade.
 l. 9

The painful warrior famed for fight,
 After a thousand victories, once foil'd,
 Is from the books of honor razed quite,

And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd. Sonnet 25, l. 9

When in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes

I all alone beweep my outcast state,
 And trouble deaf heaven with my boot-less cries. Sonnet 29, l. 1

they bear strong evidence of all being written in 1588-1589. They were published [1609] by Thomas Thorpe, who wrote the dedication:

 FORTH
 T. T.

Desiring this man's art, and that man's scope,
With what I most enjoy contented least;
Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising,
Haply I think on thee.

Sonnet 29, l. 7

For thy sweet love remember'd such wealth brings
That then I scorn to change my state with kings.

l. 13

When to the sessions of sweet silent
thought

I summon up remembrance of things past,

I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,

And with old woes new wail my dear times' waste.

Sonnet 30, l. 1

But if the while I think on thee, dear friend,

All losses are restor'd and sorrows end.

l. 13

Full many a glorious morning have I seen.

Sonnet 33, l. 1

Roses have thorns, and silver fountains mud;

Clouds and eclipses stain both moon
and sun,

And loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud.

All men make faults.

Sonnet 35, l. 2

Be thou the tenth Muse.

Sonnet 38, l. 9

For nimble thought can jump both sea and land.

Sonnet 44, l. 7

Against that time when thou shalt strangely pass,

And scarcely greet me with that sun,
thine eye,

When love, converted from the thing it
was,

Shall reasons find of settled gravity.

Sonnet 49, l. 5

Not marble, nor the gilded monuments

Of princes, shall outlive this powerful rime.

Sonnet 55, l. i.

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,

So do our minutes hasten to their end.

Sonnet 60, l. 1

Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth

And delves the parallels in beauty's brow.

l. 9

When I have seen by Time's fell hand
defac'd

The rich-proud cost of outworn buried
age.

Sonnet 64, l. 1

When I have seen the hungry ocean gain

Advantage on the kingdom of the shore,

And the firm soil win of the watery main,

Increasing store with loss, and loss with store.

l. 5

Tir'd with all these, for restful death I cry.

Sonnet 66, l. 1

And art made tongue-tied by authority.

l. 9

And simple truth miscall'd simplicity,
And captive good attending captain ill.

l. 11

No longer mourn for me when I am
dead

Than you shall hear the surly sullen bell

Give warning to the world that I am fled

From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell.

Sonnet 71, l. 1

That time of year thou mayst in me behold

When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang

Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,¹

Bare ruin'd choirs, where late the sweet birds sang.

Sonnet 73, l. 1

Clean starved for a look.

Sonnet 75, l. 10

¹ See Byron, p. 563a.

Who is it that says most? which can say more Than this rich praise — that you alone are you? Sonnet 84, l. 1

Farewell! thou art too dear for my possessing,
And like enough thou know'st thy estimate. Sonnet 87, l. 1

In sleep a king, but, waking, no such matter. l. 14

Ah! do not, when my heart hath 'scap'd
this sorrow,
Come in the rearward of a conquer'd
woe;

Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
To linger out a purpos'd overthrow.
Sonnet 90, l. 5

They that have power to hurt and will do none,
That do not do the thing they most do
show,

Who, moving others, are themselves as stone,
Unmoved, cold, and to temptation
slow. Sonnet 94, l. 1

They are the lords and owners of their faces,
Others but stewards of their excellence.
The summer's flower is to the summer
sweet,
Though to itself it only live and die.
l. 7

Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.¹ l. 14

The hardest knife ill-used doth lose his edge. Sonnet 95, l. 14

How like a winter hath my absence been. Sonnet 97, l. 1

From you have I been absent in the spring,

¹ As in the nature of things, those which most admirably flourish, most swiftly fester of putrefy, as roses, lilies, violets, while others last: so in the lives of men, those that are most blooming, are soonest turned into the opposite. — PLINY [A.D. 23-79], Natural History, bk. XVI, ch. 15

When proud-pied April, dress'd in all his trim,
Hath put a spirit of youth in everything. Sonnet 98, l. 1

Sweets grown common lose their dear delight. Sonnet 102, l. 12

To me, fair friend, you never can be old,

For as you were when first your eye I
ey'd,

Such seems your beauty still.
Sonnet 104, l. 1

When in the chronicle of wasted time
I see descriptions of the fairest wights,
And beauty making beautiful old rime,
In praise of ladies dead and lovely knights,

Then, in the blazon of sweet beauty's
best,

Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of
brow,

I see their antique pen would have ex-press'd

Even such a beauty as you master
now. Sonnet 106, l. 1

Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul

Of the wide world dreaming on things to come,

Can yet the lease of my true love control,

Suppos'd as forfeit to a confin'd doom.
The mortal moon hath her eclipse endur'd,

And the sad augurs mock their own presage;

Incertainties now crown themselves as-sur'd,

And peace proclaims olives of endless
age. Sonnet 107, l. 1

O! never say that I was false of heart, Though absence seem'd my flame to qualify. Sonnet 109, l. 1

That is my home of love: if I have rang'd,

Like him that travels, I return again.
l. 5

Alas! 'tis true I have gone here and there,

And made myself a motley to the view,
 Gor'd mine own thoughts, sold cheap
 what is most dear,
 Made old offenses of affections new.

Sonnet 110, l. 1

My nature is subdu'd
 To what it works in, like the dyer's hand.

Sonnet 111, l. 6

Let me not to the marriage of true minds

Admit impediments. Love is not love
 Which alters when it alteration finds,
 Or bends with the remover to remove:
 O, no! it is an ever-fixed mark,
 That looks on tempests and is never shaken;

It is the star to every wandering bark, Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.

Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks

Within his bending sickle's compass
 come;

Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,

But bears it out even to the edge of doom.

If this be error, and upon me prov'd,
 I never writ, nor no man ever lov'd.

Sonnet 116

What potions have I drunk of Siren
 tears,

Distill'd from limbecks foul as hell within.

Sonnet 119, l. 1

O benefit of ill! l. 9

And ruin'd love, when it is built anew, Grows fairer than at first, more strong,
 far greater. l. 11

'Tis better to be vile than vile es-
 teem'd,

When not to be receives reproach of being.

Sonnet 121, l. 1

The expense of spirit in a waste of shame

Is lust in action; and till action, lust Is perjur'd, murderous, bloody, full of blame,

Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to trust;

Enjoy'd no sooner but despised straight;

Past reason hunted; and no sooner had,

Past reason hated, as a swallow'd bait,
 On purpose laid to make the taker
 mad:

Mad in pursuit, and in possession so;
 Had, having, and in quest to have, extreme;

A bliss in proof — and prov'd, a very
 woe;

Before, a joy propos'd; behind, a dream.

All this the world well knows; yet none knows well

To shun the heaven that leads men to this hell.

Sonnet 129

My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun;

Coral is far more red than her lips'
 red:

If snow be white, why then her breasts
 are dun;

If hairs be wires, black wires grow on her head.

Sonnet 130, l. 1

When my love swears that she is made of truth,

I do believe her, though I know she lies.

Sonnet 138, l. 1

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,

Which like two spirits do suggest me still.

Sonnet 144, l. 1

Poor soul, the center of my sinful earth.

Sonnet 146, l. 1

So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds
 on men,

And Death once dead, there's no more dying then.

l. 13

Past cure I am, now Reason is past
 care,

And frantic-mad with evermore unrest.

Sonnet 147, l. 9

For I have sworn thee fair, and thought thee bright,

Who art as black as hell, as dark as night.

l. 13

You pay a great deal too dear for what's given freely.

act I, sc. i, l. 18

Two lads that thought there was no more behind

But such a day tomorrow as today,
And to be boy eternal. I, ii, 63

We were as twinn'd lambs that did frisk i' the sun,

And bleat the one at the other; what we chang'd

Was innocence for innocence.
I, ii, 67

Paddling palms and pinching fingers.
I, ii, 116

ber. I, ii, 169

A sad tale's best for winter.
I have one of sprites and goblins.

II, i, 24

The silence often of pure innocence
Persuades when speaking fails.

II, ii, 41

It is a heretic that makes the fire,
Not she which burns in 't.

II, iii, 115

I am a feather for each wind that blows. II, iii, 153

fles. IV, ii, 26

tion in English.

thought of it.

The Winter's Tale IV, ii, 30

Jog on, jog on, the footpath way,
And merrily hent the stile-a:

A merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tires in a mile-a.

IV, ii, 133

For you there's rosemary and rue; these keep

Seeming and savor all the winter long. IV, iii, 74

Daffodils,

That come before the swallow dares, and take

The winds of March with beauty.
IV, iii, 118

What you do

Still betters what is done.
IV, iii, 135

When you do dance, I wish you
A wave o' the sea, that you might ever do Nothing but that. IV, iii, 140

Lawn as white as driven snow.
IV, iii, 220

I love a ballad in print, a-life, for then we are sure they are true.

IV, iii, 262

The self-same sun that shines upon his court

Hides not his visage from our cottage, but

Looks on alike. IV, iii, 457

I'll queen it no inch further,
But milk my ewes and weep.

IV, iii, 462

Prosperity's the very bond of love, Whose fresh complexion and whose heart together Affliction alters. IV, iii, 586

Let me have no lying; it becomes none but tradesmen. IV, iii, 747

To purge melancholy.
IV, iii, 792

There's time enough for that.
V, iii, 128

He hath no drowning mark upon him; his complexion is perfect gallows.

The Tempest [1611-1612],
act I, sc. i, l. 33

Now would I give a thousand furlongs of sea for an acre of barren ground.

I, i, 70

I would fain die a dry death.

I, i, 73

What seest thou else
In the dark backward and abysm of time?

I, ii, 49

By telling of it,
Made such a sinner of his memory,
To credit his own lie.

I, ii, 100

Your tale, sir, would cure deafness.

I, ii, 106

My library
Was dukedom large enough.

I, ii, 109

The very rats
Instinctively have quit it.

I, ii, 147

Knowing I lov'd my books, he furnish'd me,
From mine own library with volumes that I prize above my dukedom.

I, ii, 166

From the still-vexed Bermoothes.

I, ii, 229

I will be correspondent to command,
And do my spiriting gently.

I, ii, 297

You taught me language; and my profit on 't

Is, I know how to curse: the red plague rid you,

For learning me your language!

I, ii, 363

Come unto these yellow sands,
And then take hands:

Curtisied when you have, and kiss'd —
The wild waves whist —

Foot it featly here and there.

I, ii, 375

This music crept by me upon the waters,

Allaying both their fury, and my passion,

With its sweet air.

The Tempest I, ii, 389

Full fathom five thy father lies;

Of his bones are coral made:

Those are pearls that were his eyes:

Nothing of him that doth fade,

But doth suffer a sea-change

Into something rich and strange.¹

I, ii, 394

The fringed curtains of thine eye advance.

I, ii, 405

Lest too light winning
Make the prize light.

I, ii, 448

There's nothing ill can dwell in such a temple:

If the ill spirit have so fair a house,
Good things will strive to dwell with 't.

I, ii, 454

He receives comfort like cold porridge.²

II, i, 10

I' the commonwealth I would by contraries

Execute all things; for no kind of traffic

Would I admit; no name of magistrate;

Letters should not be known; riches, poverty,

And use of service, none; contract, succession,

Bourn, bound of land, tilth, vineyard, none;

No use of metal, corn, or wine, or oil;
No occupation; all men idle, all;

And women too, but innocent and pure.³

II, i, 154

¹ The last three lines are inscribed on Shelley's gravestone.

³ It is a nation, would I answer Plato, that hath no kinde of traffike, no knowledge of Letters, no intelligence of numbers, no name of magistrate, nor of politike superioritie; no use of service, of riches or povertie; no contracts, no successions, no partitions, no occupation but idle; no respect of kindred, but common, no apparel but naturall, no manuring of lands, no use of wine, corne, or mettle. — MONTAIGNE, Essays, bk. I [1580], ch. 30, Of the Canniballes

What's past is prologue.

The Tempest II, i, 261

Open-eyed Conspiracy

His time doth take. II, i, 309

A very ancient and fish-like smell.

II, ii, 27

Misery acquaints a man with strange bedfellows.

II, ii, 42

I shall laugh myself to death.

II, ii, 167

'Ban, 'Ban, Ca — Caliban,

Has a new master — Get a new man.

II, ii, 197

For several virtues

Have I lik'd several women.

III, i, 42

Ferdinand: . . . Here's my hand.

Miranda: And mine, with my heart
in't.

III, i, 89

Moon-calf.

III, ii, 25

Thou deboshed fish thou.

III, ii, 30

Keep a good tongue in your head.

III, ii, 41

Flout 'em, and scout 'em; and scout
'em, and flout 'em;

Thought is free.¹ III, ii, 133

He that dies pays all debts.

III, ii, 143

The isle is full of noises,

Sounds and sweet airs, that give delight, and hurt not.

Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments

Will hum about mine ears; and sometimes voices,

That, if I then had wak'd after long sleep,

Will make me sleep again.

III, ii, 146

A kind

Of excellent dumb discourse.

III, iii, 38

Do not give dalliance

Too much the rein. IV, i, 51

Our revels now are ended. These our actors,

As I foretold you, were all spirits and
Are melted into air, into thin air;

And, like the baseless fabric of this vision,

The cloud-capp'd towers, the gorgeous palaces,

The solemn temples, the great globe itself,

Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve;
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,

Leave not a rack behind. We are such stuff

As dreams are made on, and our little life

Is rounded with a sleep.

The Tempest IV, i, 148

With foreheads villainous low.

IV, i, 252

I'll break my staff,

Bury it certain fathoms in the earth,
And, deeper than did ever plummet sound,

I'll drown my book.

V, i, 54

Where the bee sucks, there suck I

In a cowslip's bell I lie;

There I couch when owls do cry.

On the bat's back I do fly

After summer merrily:

Merrily, merrily shall I live now

Under the blossom that hangs on the bough.

V, i, 88

O brave new world,

That has such people in't!

V, i, 183

Let us not burden our remembrances
With a heaviness that's gone.

V, i, 199

My ending is despair.

If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive
me;

I had it from my father. I, iv, 26

The mirror of all courtesy. II, i, 53

Go with me, like good angels, to my end;

And, as the long divorce of steel falls on
me,

Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice,

And lift my soul to heaven. II, i, 75

This bold bad man. II, ii, 44

'Tis better to be lowly born,
And range with humble livers in content,

Than to be perk'd up in a glist'ring grief

And wear a golden sorrow. II, iii, 19

I would not be a queen
For all the world. II, iii, 45

Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain-tops that freeze,
Bow themselves when he did sing.

III, i, 3

Heaven is above all yet; there sits a judge

That no king can corrupt. III, i, 99

'Tis well said again;
And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well:

And yet words are no deeds. III, ii, 153

And then to breakfast with What appetite you have. III, ii, 203

I have touch'd the highest point of all my greatness;

And from that full meridian of my glory,

I haste now to my setting: I shall fall
Like a bright exhalation in the evening,

And no man see me more. III, ii, 224

Press not a falling man too far.¹
Henry VIII, III, ii, 334

Farewell! a long farewell, to all my greatness!

This is the state of man: today he puts forth

The tender leaves of hopes; tomorrow blossoms,

And bears his blushing honors thick
upon him;

The third day comes a frost, a killing frost;

And, when he thinks, good easy man, full surely

His greatness is a-ripening, nips his root,

And then he falls, as I do. I have ven-tur'd,

Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,

This many summers in a sea of glory,
But far beyond my depth: my high-blown pride

At length broke under me, and now has left me,

Weary and old with service, to the mercy

Of a rude stream, that must forever hide me.

Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye:

I feel my heart new open'd. O! how wretched

Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favors!

There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,

That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,

More pangs and fears than wars or women have;

And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,

Never to hope again. III, ii, 352

A peace above all earthly dignities,
A still and quiet conscience.

III, ii, 380

A load would sink a navy. III, ii, 384

Henry VIII, V, iii, 76

And sleep in dull cold marble.

Henry VIII, III, ii, 434

Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away
ambition:

By that sin fell the angels.

III, ii, 441

Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate thee;

Corruption wins not more than honesty.

Still in thy right hand carry gentle
peace,

To silence envious tongues: be just, and fear not.

Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,

Thy God's, and truth's; then if thou fall'st, O Cromwell!

Thou fall'st a blessed martyr!

III, ii, 444

Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal¹

I serv'd my king, he would not in mine
age

Have left me naked to mine enemies.

III, ii, 456

An old man, broken with the storms of state,

Is come to lay his weary bones among ye;

Give him a little earth for charity.

IV, ii, 21

He gave his honors to the world again,
His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace. IV, ii, 29

So may he rest; his faults lie gently on him!

virtues

We write in water.²

Henry VIII, IV, ii, 51

To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures. V, ii, 30

Nor shall this peace sleep with her; but as when

The bird of wonder dies, the maiden phoenix,

Her ashes new-create another heir

As great in admiration as herself.

V, v, 40

Wherever the bright sun of heaven
shall shine,

His honor and the greatness of his name

Shall be, and make new nations.

V, v, 51

Some come to take their ease

And sleep an act or two.

Epilogue, l. 2

They never taste who always drink;
 They always talk who never think.

MATTHEW PRIOR [1664-1721], Upon a Passage in the Scaligerana

² See Izaak Walton, p. 325b, and Carew, p.
 326b.

Or snorted we in the seven sleepers'
 den?

*The Good Morrow, st. 1*¹

And now good morrow to our waking souls,

Which watch not one another out of fear;

For love, all love of other sights controls,

And makes one little room, an everywhere.

Let sea-discoverers to new worlds have
 gone,

Let maps to other, worlds on worlds have shown,

Let us possess one world, each hath one, and is one. Ib. st. 2

My face in thine eye, thine in mine appears,

And true plain hearts do in the faces
 rest,

Where can we find two better hemispheres

Without sharp North, without declining West? Ib. st. 3

Go, and catch a falling star,

Get with child a mandrake root,

Tell me, where all past years are,

Or who cleft the Devil's foot.

Teach me to hear mermaids singing.²

Song, st. 1

And swear

No where

Lives a woman true, and fair.

Ib. st. 2

Though she were true, when you met her,

And last, till you write your letter,

Yet she

Will be

False, ere I come, to two, or three.

Ib. st. 3

¹ Quotations through Farewell to Love (p. 307a) are from Songs and Sonnets, composed c. 1590-1601, published posthumously.

The Songs and Sonnets were written by Donne before the turn of the century, according to Ben Jonson "ere he was twenty-five years old," but there is no evidence to show the exact date of their composition. — JOHN HAYWARD, John Donne, Complete Poetry and Selected Prose [1936]

² See T. S. Eliot, p. 1001a.

I have done one braver thing
 Than all the Worthies did;
 And yet a braver thence doth spring,
 Which is, to keep that hid.
The Undertaking, st. 1

But he who loveliness within Hath found, all outward loathes,
 For he who color loves, and skin,
 Loves but their oldest clothes.
Ib. st. 4

And dare love that, and say so too,
 And forget the He and She. Ib. st. 5

Busy old fool, unruly Sun,
 Why dost thou thus,
 Through windows, and through curtains call on us?
 Must to thy motions lovers' seasons run? The Sun Rising, st. 1

Love, all alike, no season knows, nor clime,
 Nor hours, days, months, which are the rage of time. Ib.

She is all states, and all princes, I,
 Nothing else is. Ib. st. 3

For God sake hold your tongue, and let me love.
The Canonization, st. 1

The Phoenix riddle hath more wit
 By us, we two being one, are it.
 So to one neutral thing both sexes fit,
 We die and rise the same, and prove Mysterious by this love. Ib. st. 3

As well a well-wrought urn becomes
 The greatest ashes, as half-acre tombs.
Ib. st. 4

I am two fools, I know,
 For loving, and for saying so
 In whining poetry.
The Triple Fool, st. 1

Who are a little wise, the best fools be. Ib. st. 2

Sweetest love, I do not go,
 For weariness of thee,
 Nor in hope the world can show
 A fitter love for me;
 But since that I

Must die at last, 'tis best,
 To use my self in jest
 Thus by feign'd deaths to die.
Song, st. 1

Yesternight the sun went hence,
 And yet is here today. Ib. st. 2

But think that we
 Are but turn'd aside to sleep.
Ib. st. 5

When I died last, and dear, I die
 As often as from thee I go.
The Legacy, st. 1

Oh do not die, for I shall hate
 All women so, when thou art gone.
The Fever, st. 1

Twice or thrice had I loved thee,
 Before I knew thy face or name.
Air and Angels, st. 1

'Tis true, 'tis day; what though it be?
 O wilt thou therefore rise from me?
 Why should we rise, because 'tis light?
 Did we lie down, because 'twas night?
 Love which in spite of darkness brought us hether
 Should in despite of light keep us together.
Break of Day, st. 1

All Kings, and all their favorites,
 All glory of honors, beauties, wits,
 The sun itself, which makes times, as they pass,

Is elder by a year, now, than it was When thou and I first one another saw:

All other things, to their destruction
 draw,

Only our love hath no decay;
 This, no tomorrow hath, nor yesterday,

Running, it never runs from us away,
 But truly keeps his first, last, everlasting
 day.

The Anniversary, st. 1

Send home my long strayed eyes to
 me,

Which (Oh) too long have dwelt on thee.
The Message, st. 1

'Tis the year's midnight, and it is the day's.

A Nocturnal Upon St. Lucy's Day, being the shortest day, st. 1

The world's whole sap is sunk:
The general balm th' hydroptic earth
hath drunk,

Whither, as to the bed's-feet, life is shrunk,

Dead and enterr'd; yet all these seem to laugh,

Compared with me, who am their epitaph. Ib.

For I am every dead thing,
In whom love wrought new alchemy.
For his art did express

A quintessence even from nothingness,
From dull privations, and lean emptiness

He ruin'd me, and I am re-begot
Of absence, darkness, death; things which are not. Ib. st. 2

Come live with me, and be my love,
And we will some new pleasures prove
Of golden sands, and crystal brooks,
With silken lines, and silver hooks.

The Bait,¹ st. 1

Dull sublunary lovers' love (Whose soul is sense) cannot admit Absence, because it doth remove Those things which elemented it.

A Valediction Forbidding Mourning, st. 4

Our two souls therefore which are one,² Though I must go, endure not yet
A breach, but an expansion,
Like gold to airy thinness beat.

Ib. st. 6

If they be two, they are two so
As stiff twin compasses are two,
Thy soul the fixt foot, makes no show
To move, but doth, if the other do.

Ib. st. 7

Ib. st. 3

Who ever comes to shroud me, do not

The Prohibition, st. 1

When in the planets, and the firmament

They seek so many new; then see that this

Is crumbled out again to his atomies.

'Tis all in pieces, all coherence gone;

Prince, subject, Father, Son, are things forgot.

No man is an island, entire of itself;
every man is a piece of the continent,¹ a part of the main; if a clod be washed away by the sea, Europe is the less, as well as if a promontory were, as well as if a manor of thy friends or of thine own were; any man's death diminishes me, because I am involved in mankind; and therefore never send to know for whom the bell tolls; it tolls for thee.
Ib. XVII

Now God comes to thee, not as in the dawning of the day, not as in the bud of the spring, but as the sun at noon to illustrate all shadows, as the sheaves in harvest, to fill all penuries, all occasions invite his mercies, and all times are his seasons.

plexed, labyrinthical soul!

Sermon XLVIII [1628/9]

ling, what torment is not a marriage bed to this damnation, to be secluded sight of God?

Sermon LXXVI [after 1622]

I throw myself down in my chamber, and I call in and invite God and his angels thither, and when they are there,
I neglect God and his angels, for the noise of a fly, for the rattling of a coach, for the whining of a door.

He lived in Cambridge, and observing that the scholars rid hard, his manner was to keep a large stable of horses, with boots, bridles, and whips. . . . When a man came for an horse, he was led into the stable, where there was great choice, but he obliged him to take the horse which stood next to the stable-door; so that every customer was alike well served according to his chance, and every horse ridden with the same justice. From whence it became a proverb, when what ought to be your election was forced upon you, to say Hobson's Choice.

⁴ The following well-known catch, or glee, is formed on this song:

He who goes to bed, and goes to bed sober,
Falls as the leaves do, and dies in October;
But he who goes to bed, and goes to bed mellow,
Lives as he ought to do, and dies an honest fellow.

Equity is a roguish thing. For Law we have a measure, know what to trust to; Equity is according to the conscience of him that is Chancellor, and as that is larger or narrower, so is Equity. 'Tis all one as if they should make the standard for the measure we call a "foot" a Chancellor's foot; what an uncertain measure would this be! One Chancellor has a long foot, another a short foot, a third an indifferent foot. 'Tis the same thing in the Chancellor's conscience.

There goes many a ship to sea, with many hundred souls in one ship, whose weal and woe is common, and is a true picture of a commonwealth or a human combination or society. It hath fallen out sometimes that both papists and Protestants, Jews and Turks may be embarked in one ship; upon which supposal I affirm that all the liberty of conscience that ever I pleaded for turns upon these two hinges — that none of the papists, Protestants, Jews or Turks be forced to come to the ship's prayers or worship, nor compelled from their own particular prayers or worship, if they practice any. I further add that I never denied that, notwithstanding this liberty, the commander of this ship ought to command the ship's course, yea, and also command that justice, peace, and sobriety be kept and practiced, both among the seamen and all the passengers.

³ Sub rosa. This phrase, meaning secretly, is of unknown origin. With the ancients the rose was emblematic of secrecy, and when a host hung a rose above his tables, his guests understood that all words spoken under it were to remain secret. Later, roses were carved as decorations on the ceilings of council chambers and confessionals, with the same significance.

For Lycidas your sorrow is not dead, Sunk though he be beneath the watery floor;

So sinks the day-star in the ocean bed;
And yet anon repairs his drooping
head,

And tricks his beams, and with new-spangled ore

Flames in the forehead of the morning

Books are not absolutely dead things, but do contain a potency of life in them to be as active as that soul was whose progeny they are; nay they do preserve as in a vial the purest efficacy and extraction of that living intellect that bred them. Areopagitica [1644]

As good almost kill a man as kill a good book: who kills a man kills a reasonable creature, God's image; but he who destroys a good book kills reason itself. Ib.

A good book is the precious lifeblood of a master spirit, embalmed and treasured up on purpose to a life beyond life. Ib.

I cannot praise a fugitive and cloistered virtue, unexercised and unbreathed, that never sallies out and sees her adversary, but slinks out of the race, where that immortal garland is to be run for, not without dust and heat. Ib.

Where there is much desire to learn, there of necessity will be much arguing, much writing, many opinions; for opinion in good men is but knowledge in the making. Ib.

Methinks I see in my mind a noble and puissant nation rousing herself like a strong man after sleep, and shaking her invincible locks. Methinks I see her as an eagle mewing her mighty youth, and kindling her undazzled eyes at the full midday beam.

FRANÇOIS, DUC DE LA ROCHEFOUCAULD¹

1613–1680

Our virtues are most frequently but vices in disguise.²

Reflections; or, Sentences and Moral Maxims. Epigraph

¹ The fifth edition [1678] is the standard one.

² This epigraph, which is the key to the system of La Rochefoucauld, is found in another form as no. 179 of the Maxims of the first edition, 1665; it is omitted from the second and Self-love is the greatest of all flatterers.

Reflections 2

We all have strength enough to endure the misfortunes of others.¹

Ib. 19

Philosophy triumphs easily over past evils and future evils; but present evils triumph over it.²

Ib. 22

We need greater virtues to sustain good fortune than bad.

Ib. 25

If we had no faults of our own, we would not take so much pleasure in noticing those of others.

Ib. 31

Jealousy feeds upon suspicion, and it turns into fury or it ends as soon as we pass from suspicion to certainty.

Ib. 32

Self-interest speaks all sorts of tongues, and plays all sorts of roles, even that of disinterestedness.

Ib. 39

We are never so happy nor so unhappy as we imagine.

Ib. 49

To succeed in the world, we do everything we can to appear successful.

Ib. 56

There is no disguise which can for long conceal love where it exists or simulate it where it does not.

Ib. 70

There are very few people who are not ashamed of having been in love when they no longer love each other.

Ib. 71

True love is like ghosts, which everybody talks about and few have seen.

Ib. 76

The love of justice in most men is simply the fear of suffering injustice.

Ib. 78

Silence is the best tactic for him who distrusts himself.

Ib. 79

third, and reappears for the first time in the fourth edition at the head of the Reflections.

— AIMÉ MARTIN

² See Goldsmith, p. 448b.

It is more ignominious to mistrust our friends than to be deceived by them.

Reflections 84

Everyone complains of his memory, and no one complains of his judgment.

Ib. 89

Old people like to give good advice, as solace for no longer being able to provide bad examples.

Ib. 93

A man who is ungrateful is sometimes less to blame for it than his benefactor.

Ib. 96

The mind is always the dupe of the heart.¹

Ib. 102

Nothing is given so profusely as advice.

Ib. 110

The true way to be deceived is to think oneself more clever than others.

Ib. 127

We would rather speak ill of ourselves than not talk about ourselves at all.

Ib. 138

Usually we praise only to be praised.

Ib. 146

Our repentance is not so much regret for the ill we have done as fear of the ill that may happen to us in consequence.

Ib. 180

Who lives without folly is not so wise as he thinks.

Ib. 209

Most people judge men only by their success or their good fortune.

Ib. 212

Hypocrisy is the homage that vice pays to virtue.

Ib. 218

Too great haste in paying off an obligation is a kind of ingratitude.

Ib. 226

There is great skill in knowing how to conceal one's skill.

Ib. 245

The pleasure of love is in loving. We

¹ The mind lives on the heart

Like any parasite.

EMILY DICKINSON, The Mind Lives on the Heart [c. 1876] are happier in the passion we feel than in that we arouse.¹

Reflections 259

Absence diminishes mediocre passions and increases great ones, as the wind blows out candles and fans fire.

Ib. 276

We always like those who admire us; we do not always like those whom we admire.

Ib. 294

The gratitude of most men is merely a secret desire to receive greater benefits.²

Ib. 298

We frequently forgive those who bore us, but cannot forgive those whom we bore.

Ib. 304

Lovers never get tired of each other, because they are always talking about themselves.

Ib. 312

In jealousy there is more self-love than love.

Ib. 324

We confess to little faults only to persuade ourselves that we have no great ones.

Ib. 327

We pardon to the extent that we love.

Ib. 330

We rarely find that people have good sense unless they agree with us.³

Ib. 347

Jealousy is always born together with love, but it does not always die when love dies.

Ib. 361

Mediocre minds usually dismiss anything which reaches beyond their own understanding.⁴

Ib. 375

It therefore comes to pass that everyone is fond of relating his own exploits and displaying the strength both of his body and his mind, and that men are on this account a nuisance one to the other.

Ib. 54: note

I refer those actions which work out the good of the agent to courage, and those which work out the good of others to nobility. Therefore temperance, sobriety, and presence of mind in danger, etc., are species of courage; but modesty, clemency, etc., are species of nobility.

Ib. 59: note

November 9, 1665

Saw a wedding in the church; and strange to see what delight we married people have to see these poor fools decoyed into our condition.

December 25, 1665

Musick and women I cannot but give way to, whatever my business is.

March 9, 1666

The truth is, I do indulge myself a little the more in pleasure, knowing that this is the proper age of my life to do it; and, out of my observation that most men that do thrive in the world do forget to take pleasure during the time that they are getting their estate, but reserve that till they have got one, and then it is too late for them to enjoy it.

March 10, 1666

Home, and, being washing-day, dined upon cold meat.

April 4, 1666

Musick is the thing of the world that I love most.

July 30, 1666

January 14, 1667

Did satisfy myself mighty fair in the truth of the saying that the world do not grow old at all, but is in as good condition in all respects as ever it was.

February 3, 1667

This day I am, by the blessing of God, 34 years old, in very good health and mind's content, and in condition of estate much beyond whatever my friends could expect of a child of theirs, this day 34 years. The Lord's

Gives me some kind of content to remember how painful it is sometimes to keep money, as well as to get it. October 11, 1667

I find my wife hath something in her gizzard, that only waits an opportunity of being provoked to bring up; but I will not, for my content-sake, give it. June 17, 1668

In appearance, at least, he being on all occasions glad to be at friendship with me, though we hate one another, and know it on both sides. September 22, 1668

I do hate to be unquiet at home. January 22, 1669

And so I betake myself to that course, which is almost as much as to see myself go into my grave; for which, and all the discomforts that will accompany my being blind, the good God prepare me!

1651-1715

Do not men die fast enough without being destroyed by each other? Can any man be insensible of the brevity of life?
and can he who knows it, think life too

Télémaque, bk. XIII

Mankind, by the perverse depravity of their nature, esteem that which they have most desired as of no value the moment it is possessed, and torment themselves with fruitless wishes for that which is beyond their reach.

Preface to HOZUMI IKAN, Naniwa Miyage

I take pathos to be entirely a matter of restraint. . . . When one says of something which is sad that it is sad, one loses the implications, and in the end, even the impression of sadness is slight. It is essential that one not say of a thing that 'it is sad,' but that it be sad of itself. Ib.

Helvétius in The Friends of Voltaire [1906] by S. G. TALLENTYRE (E. Beatrice Hall). She claims it was a paraphrase of Voltaire's words in the Essay on Tolerance: "Think for yourselves and let others enjoy the privilege to do so too."

Norbert Guterman, in A Book of French Quotations [1963], suggests that the probable source for the quotation is from a line in a letter to M. le Riche [February 6, 1770]: "Monsieur l'abbé, I detest what you write, but I would give my life to make it possible for you to continue to write."

¹ This remark refers to the legend that Saint Denis, carrying his head in his hands, walked from Montmartre to St. Denis, a few miles north of Paris. Speech [November 18, 1777]

I invoke the genius of the Constitution. Ib.

The poorest man may in his cottage bid defiance to all the forces of the Crown. It may be frail — its roof may shake — the wind may blow through it — the storm may enter — the rain may enter — but the King of England cannot enter — all his force dares not cross the threshold of the ruined tenement!

Speech on the Excise Bill

SAMUEL JOHNSON

1709-1784

Of all the griefs that harass the distressed, Sure the most bitter is a scornful jest.

London [1738] (An imitation of the Third Satire of Juvenal), l. 166

This mournful truth is ev'rywhere confess'd —

Slow rises worth, by poverty depress'd.¹
Ib. l. 176

When learning's triumph o'er her barb'rous foes

First rear'd the stage, immortal Shakespeare rose;

Each change of many-color'd life he drew,

Exhausted worlds, and then imagin'd new:

Existence saw him spurn her bounded reign,

And panting Time toil'd after him in vain.

Prologue at the Opening of Drury Lane Theatre [1747]

Cold approbation gave the ling'ring bays,

For those who durst not censure, scarce could praise. Ib.

Declamation roar'd, while Passion slept. Ib.

¹ Three years later Johnson wrote, "Mere unassisted merit advances slowly, if — what is not very common — it advances at all."

The wild vicissitudes of taste.

Prologue at the Opening of Drury Lane Theatre

For we that live to please must please to live. Ib.

Studious to please, yet not ashamed to fail.

Prologue to the Tragedy of Irene [1749]

Let observation with extensive view Survey mankind, from China to Peru.¹
Vanity of Human Wishes
[1749], l. 1

Deign on the passing world to turn thine eyes,
And pause a while from learning to be wise.

There mark what ill the scholar's life assail —

Toil, envy, want, the patron, and the jail. Ib. l. 157

A frame of adamant, a soul of fire,
No dangers fright him, and no labors tire. Ib. l. 191

He left the name at which the world grew pale,
To point a moral, or adorn a tale.
Ib. l. 221

"Enlarge my life with multitude of days!"

In health, in sickness, thus the suppliant prays:

Hides from himself his state, and shuns
to know

That life protracted is protracted woe.
Ib. l. 255

Superfluous lags the vet'ran on the stage. Ib. l. 308

Must helpless man, in ignorance sedate, Roll darkling down the torrent of his fate? Ib. l. 345

Secure, whate'er he gives, he gives the best. Ib. l. 356

¹ DE QUINCEY quotes with approval, but without naming him, the criticism of a writer who contends that this couplet amounts in effect to this: "Let observation with extensive observation observe mankind extensively." — Rhetoric [1828]

With these celestial Wisdom calms the mind,
And makes the happiness she does not find.

Vanity of Human Wishes,
l. 367

Curiosity is one of the permanent and certain characteristics of a vigorous mind.

The Rambler ¹ [March 12, 1751]

No place affords a more striking conviction of the vanity of human hopes than a public library.

to vex them [the Scotch]. — SAMUEL JOHNSON;
from Ib. II, 434

The joy of life is variety; the tenderest love requires to be renewed by intervals of absence.

The Idler [1758-1760], no. 39

He is no wise man that will quit a certainty for an uncertainty. Ib. 57

Ye who listen with credulity to the whispers of fancy, and pursue with eagerness the phantoms of hope; who expect that age will perform the promises of youth, and that the deficiencies of the present day will be supplied by the morrow; attend to the history of Rasselas, Prince of Abyssinia.

Rasselas [1759], ch. 1

To a poet nothing can be useless.

Ib. 10

Human life is everywhere a state in which much is to be endured and little to be enjoyed. Ib. 11

Marriage has many pains, but celibacy has no pleasures. Ib. 26

Example is always more efficacious than precept. Ib. 29

The endearing elegance of female friendship. Ib. 45

How small, of all that human hearts endure,

That part which laws or kings can cause or cure!

Still to ourselves in every place consign'd,

Our own felicity we make or find.

¹ The attribution to Mme. de Pompadour is made by DESPRÉS, Mémoires de Madame de Hausset; also by SAINTE-BEUVE and LA TOUR. LAROUSSE, Fleurs Historiques, attributes the saying to the King. It was original with neither, for it is an old French proverb.

SAMUEL ADAMS

1722–1803

Let us contemplate our forefathers, and posterity, and resolve to maintain the rights bequeathed to us from the former, for the sake of the latter. The necessity of the times, more than ever, calls for our utmost circumspection, deliberation, fortitude and perseverance. Let us remember that “if we suffer tamely a lawless attack upon our liberty, we encourage it, and involve others in our doom.” It is a very serious consideration . . . that millions yet unborn may be the miserable sharers of the event. Speech [1771]

What a glorious morning for America! ¹

Well had the boding tremblers learn'd to trace

The day's disasters in his morning face;
Full well they laugh'd with counterfeited glee,

At all his jokes, for many a joke had he;

Full well the busy whisper, circling round,

Convey'd the dismal tidings when he frown'd;

Yet he was kind; or if severe in aught,
The love he bore to learning was in fault;

Through a wise and salutary neglect [of the colonies], a generous nature has been suffered to take her own way to perfection; when I reflect upon these effects, when I see how profitable they have been to us, I feel all the pride of power sink and all presumption in the wisdom of human contrivances melt and die away within me. My rigor relents. I pardon something to the spirit of liberty. Ib.

The use of force alone is but temporary. It may subdue for a moment; but it does not remove the necessity of subduing again: and a nation is not governed, which is perpetually to be conquered. Ib.

Nothing less will content me, than whole America. Ib.

Abstract liberty, like other mere abstractions, is not to be found.

Second Speech on Conciliation with America. The Thirteen Resolutions

The religion most prevalent in our northern colonies is a refinement on the principles of resistance: it is the dissidence of dissent, and the protestantism of the Protestant religion. Ib.

In no country perhaps in the world is law so general a study [as in America]. . . . This study renders men acute, inquisitive, dexterous, prompt in attack, ready in defense, full of resources. . . . They augur misgovernment at a distance, and snuff the approach of tyranny in every tainted breeze. Ib.

I do not know the method of drawing up an indictment against an whole people. Ib.

It is not, what a lawyer tells me I may do; but what humanity, reason, and justice, tell me I ought to do. Ib.

The march of the human mind is slow. Ib.

Freedom and not servitude is the cure of anarchy; as religion, and not atheism, is the true remedy for superstition. Ib.

All government — indeed, every human benefit and enjoyment, every virtue and every prudent act — is founded on compromise and barter. Ib.

Instead of a standing revenue, you will have therefore a perpetual quarrel. Ib.

Slavery they can have anywhere. It is a weed that grows in every soil. Ib.

Deny them this participation of freedom, and you break that sole bond, which originally made, and must still preserve the unity of the empire. Ib.

It is the love of the [British] people; it is their attachment to their government, from the sense of the deep stake they have in such a glorious institution, which gives you both your army and your navy, and infuses into both that liberal obedience, without which your army would be a base rabble, and your navy nothing but rotten timber.

Second Speech on Conciliation with America. The Thirteen Resolutions

Magnanimity in politics is not seldom the truest wisdom; and a great empire and little minds go ill together. Ib.

By adverting to the dignity of this high calling our ancestors have turned a savage wilderness into a glorious empire: and have made the most extensive, and the only honorable conquests, not by destroying, but by promoting the wealth, the number, the happiness of the human race. Ib.

Corrupt influence, which is itself the perennial spring of all prodigality, and of all disorder; which loads us, more than millions of debt; which takes away vigor from our arms, wisdom from our councils, and every shadow of authority and credit from the most venerable parts of our constitution.

Reflections on the Revolution in France [1790]

Government is a contrivance of human wisdom to provide for human wants. Men have a right that these wants should be provided for by this wisdom. Ib.

The unbought grace of life, the cheap defense of nations, the nurse of manly sentiment and heroic enterprise is gone! Ib.

That chastity of honor, which felt a stain like a wound. Ib.

Vice itself lost half its evil, by losing all its grossness. Ib.

Kings will be tyrants from policy, when subjects are rebels from principle. Ib.

Learning will be cast into the mire, and trodden down under the hoofs of a swinish multitude. Ib.

Reflections on the Revolution in France

Superstition is the religion of feeble minds. Ib.

He that wrestles with us strengthens our nerves, and sharpens our skill. Our antagonist is our helper. Ib.

To execute laws is a royal office; to execute orders is not to be a king. However, a political executive magistracy, though merely such, is a great trust.¹ Ib.

Facts are stubborn things; and whatever may be our wishes, our inclinations, or the dictates of our passions, they cannot alter the state of facts and evidence.

Defense of the British soldiers on trial for the Boston Massacre [1770]

The law, in all vicissitudes of government, fluctuations of the passions, or flights of enthusiasm, will preserve a steady undeviating course; it will not bend to the uncertain wishes, imaginations and wanton tempers of men. . . . It does not enjoin that which pleases a weak, frail man, but without any regard to persons, commands that which is good and punishes evil in all, whether rich or poor, high or low — 'tis deaf, inexorable, inflexible. On the one hand it is inexorable to the cries and lamentations of the prisoners; on the other it is deaf, deaf as an adder,² to the clamors of the populace. Ib.

This is the most magnificent movement of all! There is a dignity, a majesty, a sublimity, in this last effort of the patriots that I greatly admire. The people should never rise without doing something to be remembered — something notable and striking. This destruction of the tea is so bold, so daring, so firm, intrepid and inflexible, and it must have so important consequences, and so lasting, that I can't but consider it as an epoch in history!

The second day of July, 1776,² will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. I repeat it, sir, we must fight! An appeal to arms, and to the God of hosts, is all that is left us. Ib.

It is vain, sir, to extenuate the matter. The gentlemen may cry, Peace, peace! but there is no peace.⁴ The war has actually begun! The next gale that sweeps from the north will bring to our ears the clash of resounding arms! Our brethren are already in the field! Why stand we here idle? What is it that the gentlemen wish? Panics, in some cases, have their uses; they produce as much good as hurt. Their duration is always short; the mind soon grows through them and acquires a firmer habit than before. Summary View of the Rights of British America [1774]

When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God² entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation. We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all men are created equal;
that they are endowed by their creator with certain unalienable rights;³ that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; that to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that whenever any form of government becomes destructive to these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness.

First Inaugural Address
[March 4, 1801]

But would the honest patriot, in the full tide of successful experiment, abandon a government which has so far kept us free and firm, on the theoretic and visionary fear that this government, the world's best hope, may by possibility want energy to preserve itself? Ib.

Sometimes it is said that man cannot be trusted with the government of himself. Can he, then, be trusted with the government of others? Or have we found angels in the forms of kings to govern him? Let history answer this question. Ib.

Still one thing more, fellow citizens — a wise and frugal government, which shall restrain men from injuring one another, which shall leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement, and shall not take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned. This is the sum of good government, and this is necessary to close the circle of our felicities. Ib.

Equal and exact justice to all men, of whatever state or persuasion, religious or political; peace, commerce, and honest friendship with all nations, entangling alliances with none. . . . Freedom of religion; freedom of the press, and freedom of person under the protection of the habeas corpus, and trial by juries impartially selected. These principles form the bright constellation which has gone before us, and guided our steps through an age of revolution and reformation. The wisdom of our sages and the blood of our heroes have been devoted to their attainment. They should be the creed of our political faith, the text of civil instruction, the touchstone by which we try the services of those we trust; and should we wander from them in moments of error or alarm, let us hasten to retrace our steps and to regain the road which alone leads to peace, liberty, and safety.

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES

1787

We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America. Preamble

Treason against the United States, shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court.

Art. III, sec. 3

This Constitution, and the laws of the United States, which shall be made in pursuance thereof; and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the Supreme Law of the land; and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby, any thing in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding. Art. VI, sec. 2

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances. First Amendment [1791]

ANTOINE LAURENT LAVOISIER

1743–1794

It is impossible to dissociate language from science or science from language, because every natural science always involves three things: the sequence of phenomena on which the science is based; the abstract concepts which call these phenomena to mind; and the words in which the concepts are expressed. To call forth a concept a word is needed; to portray a phenomenon, a concept is needed. All three mirror one and the same reality.¹

Traité Élémentaire de Chimie

I shall therefore content myself with saying that if, by the term elements, we mean to express the simple and indivisible molecules that compose bodies, it is probable that we know nothing about them; but if, on the contrary, we express by the term elements or principles of bodies the idea of the last point reached by analysis, all substances that we have not yet been able to decompose by any means are elements to us.²

By a faction, understand a number of citizens, whether amounting to a majority or minority of the whole, who are united and actuated by some common impulse of passion, or of interest, adverse to the rights of other citizens, or to the permanent and aggregate interests of the community.

The Federalist [1787], no. 10

The latent causes of faction are thus sown in the nature of man; and we see them everywhere brought into different degrees of activity, according to the different circumstances of civil society. A zeal for different opinions concerning religion, concerning government, and many other points, as well of speculation as of practice; an attachment of different leaders ambitiously contending for pre-eminence and power; or to persons of other descriptions whose fortunes have been interesting to the human passions, have, in turn, divided mankind into parties, inflamed them with mutual animosity, and rendered them much more disposed to vex and oppress each other than to cooperate for their common good. . . . But the most common and durable source of factions has been the various and unequal distribution of property.

turbulent and changing; they seldom judge or determine right. Give therefore to the first class a distinct, permanent share in the government. They will check the unsteadiness of the second, and as they cannot receive any advantage by a change, they therefore will ever maintain good government.

Federal Convention Debates

We are now forming a republican government. Real liberty is neither found in despotism or the extremes of democracy, but in moderate governments. Ib. [June 26, 1787]

Let Americans disdain to be the instruments of European greatness. Let the thirteen States, bound together in a strict and indissoluble Union, concur in erecting one great American system, superior to the control of all transatlantic force or influence, and able to dictate the terms of the connection between the old and the new world!

The Federalist [1787–1788], no. 11

Government implies the power of making laws. It is essential to the idea of a law, that it be attended with a sanction; or, in other words, a penalty or punishment for disobedience.

Ib. 15

Why has government been instituted at all? Because the passions of men will not conform to the dictates of reason and justice, without constraint. Ib.

Every power vested in a government is in its nature sovereign, and includes by force of the term a right to employ all the means requisite . . . to the attainment of the ends of such power.

Opinion on the Constitutionality of the Bank [February 23, 1791]

McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheaton 316, 407 [1819]

And did those feet in ancient time Walk upon England's mountains green?

And was the holy Lamb of God
On England's pleasant pastures seen?

And did the countenance divine Shine forth upon our clouded hills?
And was Jerusalem builded here
Among those dark Satanic mills?

Bring me my bow of burning gold:
Bring me my arrows of desire:
Bring me my spear: O clouds unfold!
Bring me my chariot of fire.

I will not cease from mental fight,
Nor shall my sword sleep in my hand

We owe it, therefore, to candor, and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those powers to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety. With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we . . . shall not interfere. But with the governments . . . whose independence we have . . . acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them, or controlling, in any other manner, their destiny, by any European power, in any other light than as a manifestation of an unfriendly disposition towards the United States.

² Translated by THEODORE SPENCER for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, for the performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

It was during his student days in Bonn that Beethoven fastened upon Schiller's poem. . . . The heady sense of liberation in the verses must have appealed to him as they appealed to every German. They were in the spirit of the times, the spirit that had swept Europe and America, and Beethoven belonged to his time. — JOHN N. I have learned

To look on nature, not as in the hour
Of thoughtless youth; but hearing oftentimes

The still, sad music of humanity,
Nor harsh nor grating, though of ample
power

To chasten and subdue. And I have felt A presence that disturbs me with the joy

Of elevated thoughts; a sense sublime
Of something far more deeply inter-fused,

Whose dwelling is the light of setting
suns,

And the round ocean and the living
air,

And the blue sky, and in the mind of
man;

A motion and a spirit, that impels
All thinking things, all objects of all thought,

And rolls through all things.¹

The Lay of the Last Minstrel, canto II, st. 22

In peace, Love tunes the shepherd's reed;
 In war, he mounts the warrior's steed;
 In halls, in gay attire is seen;
 In hamlets, dances on the green.
 Love rules the court, the camp, the grove,
 And men below, and saints above;
 For love is heaven, and heaven is love.

 Mute Nature mourns her worshipper,
 And celebrates his obsequies.
Ib. V, st. 1

True love's the gift which God has given
 To man alone beneath the heaven:
 It is not fantasy's hot fire,
 Whose wishes, soon as granted, fly;
 It liveth not in fierce desire,
 With dead desire it doth not die;
 It is the secret sympathy,
 The silver link, the silken tie,
 Which heart to heart and mind to mind
 In body and in soul can bind.

Poetry is not the proper antithesis to prose, but to science. Poetry is opposed

Definitions of Poetry [1811]

Reviewers are usually people who would have been poets, historians, biographers, etc., if they could; they have tried their talents at one or at the other, and have failed; therefore they turn critics.¹

Lectures on Shakespeare and Milton [1811–1812]

The last speech [Iago's soliloquy], the motive-hunting of a motiveless malignity — how awful!

Notes on Shakespeare [c. 1812]

Taste is the intermediate faculty which connects the active with the passive powers of our nature, the intellect with the senses; and its appointed function is to elevate the images of the latter, while it realizes the ideas of the former.

On the Principles of Genial Criticism [1814]

The most general definition of beauty . . . Multeity in Unity. Ib.

The Good consists in the congruity of a thing with the laws of the reason and the nature of the will, and in its fitness to determine the latter to actualize the former: and it is always discursive. The Beautiful arises from the perceived harmony of an object, whether sight or sound, with the inborn and constitutive rules of the judgment and imagination: and it is always intuitive. Ib.

The imagination . . . that reconciling and mediatory power, which incorporating the reason in images of the sense and organizing (as it were) the flux of the senses by the permanence and self-circling energies of the reason, gives birth to a system of symbols, harmonious in themselves, and consubstantial with the truths of which they are the conductors.

The Statesman's Manual [1816]

Not the poem which we have read, but that to which we return, with the greatest pleasure, possesses the genuine power, and claims the name of essential poetry.¹

Biographia Literaria [1817], ch. 1

Experience informs us that the first defense of weak minds is to recriminate. Ib. 2

Indignation at literary wrongs I leave to men born under happier stars. I cannot afford it. Ib.

Milton had a highly imaginative, Cowley a very fanciful mind. Ib. 4

An idea, in the highest sense of that word, cannot be conveyed but by a symbol. Ib. 9

Veracity does not consist in saying, but in the intention of communicating truth. Ib.

Never pursue literature as a trade. Ib. 11

Until you understand a writer's ignorance, presume yourself ignorant of his understanding. Ib. 12

During the act of knowledge itself, the objective and subjective are so instantly united, that we cannot determine to which of the two the priority belongs. Ib.

The primary imagination I hold to be the living power and prime agent of all human perception; and as a repetition in the finite mind of the eternal act of creation in the infinite I Am. Ib. 13

The secondary imagination . . . dissolves, diffuses, dissipates, in order to re-create; or where this process is rendered impossible, yet still at all events it struggles to idealize and to unify. It is essentially vital, even as all objects (as objects) are essentially fixed and dead.

Biographia Literaria, ch. 13

The fancy is indeed no other than a mode of memory emancipated from the order of time and space.

Ib.

The two cardinal points of poetry, the power of exciting the sympathy of the reader by a faithful adherence to the truth of nature, and the power of giving the interest of novelty by the modifying colors of imagination.

Ib. 14

That willing suspension of disbelief for the moment, which constitutes poetic faith.

Ib.

The poet, described in ideal perfection, brings the whole soul of man into activity, with the subordination of its faculties to each other, according to their relative worth and dignity. He diffuses a tone and spirit of unity, that blends, and (as it were) fuses, each into each, by that synthetic and magical power . . . imagination.

Ib.

[Imagination] reveals itself in the balance or reconciliation of opposite or discordant qualities: of sameness, with difference; of the general, with the concrete; the idea, with the image; the individual, with the representative; the sense of novelty and freshness, with old and familiar objects; a more than usual state of emotion, with more than usual order; judgment ever awake and steady self-possession, with enthusiasm and feeling profound or vehement; and while it blends and harmonizes the natural and the artificial, still subordinates art to nature; the manner to the matter; and our admiration of the poet to our sympathy with the poetry.

Ib.

No man was ever yet a great poet, without being at the same time a profound philosopher.

Ib. 15

While [Shakespeare] darts himself forth and passes into all the forms of human character and passion, the one Proteus of the fire and the flood, [Milton] attracts all forms and things to himself, into the unity of his own Ideal. All things and modes of action shape themselves anew in the being of Milton; while Shakespeare becomes all things, yet ever remaining himself.

Our myriad-minded Shakespeare.¹

Ib.

The best part of human language, properly so called, is derived from reflection on the acts of the mind itself.²

Ib. 17

The organic form, on the other hand, is innate; it shapes, as it develops, itself from within, and the fullness of its development is one and the same with the perfection of its outward form.

Shakespeare's Judgment Equal to His Genius [1818]

Now Art, used collectively for painting, sculpture, architecture and music, is the mediatrix between, and reconciler of, nature and man. It is, therefore, the power of humanizing nature, of infusing the thoughts and passions of man into everything which is the object of his contemplation.

On Poesy or Art [1818]

The artist must imitate that which is within the thing, that which is active through form and figure, and discourses to us by symbols.

Ib.

The heart should have fed upon the truth, as insects on a leaf, till it be tinged with the color, and show its food in every . . . minutest fiber.

Table Talk [July 12, 1827]

The man's desire is for the woman; but the woman's desire is rarely other than for the desire of the man.

Ib. [July 23, 1827]

Poetry is certainly something more than good sense, but it must be good sense at all events; just as a palace is more than a house, but it must be a house, at least.

Ib. [May 9, 1830]

That passage is what I call the sublime dashed to pieces by cutting too close with the fiery four-in-hand round the corner of nonsense.

Ib.

The happiness of life is made up of minute fractions — the little soon forgotten charities of a kiss or smile, a kind look, a heartfelt compliment, and the countless infinitesimals of pleasurable and genial feeling.

It was the gods who formed all the lands of the world at the Creation, and these gods were without exception born in Japan. Japan is thus the homeland of the gods, and that is why we call it the Land of the Gods.

Summary of the Ancient Way

With their scientific instruments the Dutch attempt to determine the properties of things. Unlike China, Holland is a splendid country where they do not rely on superficial conjectures. Ib.

The ancient Japanese all constantly and correctly practiced what the Chinese called humanity, righteousness, the five cardinal virtues and the rest, without having any need to name them or to teach them. In China . . . there were evil customs from the very outset, and human behavior . . . was extremely licentious. That is the reason why so many sages appeared in ancient times to guide and instruct the Chinese.

On Going a Journey

When I am in the country I wish to vegetate like the country. Ib.

¹ Said when told that his defense of the Compromise would endanger his chances for the Presidency.

The soul of a journey is liberty, perfect liberty, to think, feel, do just as one pleases.

Table Talk. On Going a Journey

Give me a clear blue sky over my head, and the green turf beneath my feet, a winding road before me, and a three hours' march to dinner — and then to thinking! It is hard if I cannot start some game on these lone heaths.

Oh! it is great to shake off the trammels of the world and of public opinion — to lose our importunate, tormenting, everlasting personal identity and become the creature of the moment, clear of all ties . . . to be known by no other title than the gentleman in the parlor!

Ib.

What I mean by living to one's self is living in the world, as in it, not of it. . . . It is to be a silent spectator of the mighty scene of things; . . . to take a thoughtful, anxious interest or curiosity in what is passing in the world, but not to feel the slightest inclination to make or meddle with it.

¹ At the first meeting of the London Mechanics' Institution, 1825, John Reynolds, head of a school in Clerkenwell, acted as secretary of the meeting. Lord Brougham, who spoke at this meeting, said in the course of his remarks, "Look out, gentlemen, the schoolmaster is abroad." The phrase attracted little attention at that time, but when used in a speech three years later, it at once became popular.

Whose broad stripes and bright stars,
 through the perilous fight,
 O'er the ramparts we watched were so gallantly streaming?
 And the rockets' red glare, the bombs
 bursting in air,

unscriptural doctrine of the Trinity. "To us," as to the Apostle and the primitive Christians, "there is one God, even the Father." With Jesus, we worship the Father, as the only living and true God. We are astonished, that any man can read the New Testament, and avoid the conviction, that the Father alone is God.

Unitarian Christianity
[Baltimore, 1819]

I see the marks of God in the heavens and the earth, but how much more in a liberal intellect, in magnanimity, in unconquerable rectitude, in a philanthropy which forgives every wrong, and which never despairs of the cause of Christ and human virtue! I do and I must reverence human nature.¹ . . . I bless it for its kind affections, for its strong and tender love. I honor it for its struggles against oppression . . . for its achievements in science and art, and still more for its examples of heroic and saintly virtue. These are marks of a divine origin and the pledges of a celestial inheritance; and I thank God that my own lot is bound up with that of the human race.²

Likeness to God [Providence,
Rhode Island, 1828]

There are seasons, in human affairs, of inward and outward revolution, when new depths seem to be broken up in the soul, when new wants are unfolded in multitudes, and a new and undefined good is thirsted for. There are periods when the principles of experience need to be modified, when hope and trust and instinct claim a share with prudence in the guidance of affairs, when, in truth, to dare, is the highest wisdom.³

enjoy intercourse with superior minds. . . . In the best books, great men talk to us, give us their most precious thoughts, and pour their souls into ours. God be thanked for books. They are the voices of the distant and the dead, and make us heirs of the spiritual life of past ages. Books are true levelers. They give to all, who will faithfully use them, the society, the spiritual presence, of the best and greatest of our race.

Self-Culture [Boston, September

The mind, in proportion as it is cut off from free communication with nature, with revelation, with God, with itself, loses its life, just as the body droops when debarred from the air and the cheering light from heaven.

1811]

The very essence of a free government consists in considering offices as public trusts,² bestowed for the good of the country, and not for the benefit of an individual or a party.

Speech [February 13, 1835]

A power has risen up in the government greater than the people themselves, consisting of many and various and powerful interests, combined into one mass, and held together by the cohesive power of the vast surplus in the banks.³

Speech [May 27, 1836]

¹ Usually quoted as “Don't give up the ship”; Lawrence's final order as he was carried below fatally wounded, before capture of his ship by the British frigate Shannon.

Near this spot are deposited the remains of one who possessed Beauty without Vanity, Strength without Insolence, Courage without Ferocity, and all the Virtues of Man, without his Vices. This Praise, which would be un-meaning Flattery if inscribed over human ashes, is but a just tribute to the Memory of Boatswain, a Dog.

 skulls. Ib. st. 18

There was a sound of revelry by night,
 And Belgium's capital had gather'd then

Her beauty and her chivalry, and bright

The lamps shone o'er fair women and brave men.

A thousand hearts beat happily; and when

Music arose with its voluptuous swell, Soft eyes look'd love to eyes which spake again,

 Palafox, governor of Saragossa, when summoned to surrender by the French, who besieged that city in 1808.

And all went merry as a marriage bell.
But hush! hark! a deep sound strikes like a rising knell!

Childe Harold's Pilgrimage,
canto III, st. 21

Did ye not hear it? — No! 'twas but the wind,

Or the car rattling o'er the stony street.

On with the dance! let joy be unconfined;

No sleep till morn, when Youth and Pleasure meet

CHARTIER [c. 1385 – c. 1433]

This living hand, now warm and capable

Of earnest grasping, would, if it were cold

And in the icy silence of the tomb,
So haunt thy days and chill thy dreaming nights

That thou would wish thine own heart dry of blood

So in my veins red life might stream
again,

And thou be conscience-calm'd — see here it is —

I hold it towards you.

Love in a hut, with water and a crust,
Is — Love, forgive us! — cinders, ashes, dust.

Poems [1820]. Lamia, pt. II, l. 1

There was an awful rainbow once in heaven:

We know her woof, her texture; she is given

In the dull catalogue of common things.

Philosophy will clip an angel's wings.

St. Agnes' Eve — Ah, bitter chill it
was!

The owl, for all his feathers, was a-cold.
The hare limp'd trembling through the frozen grass,

And silent was the flock in wooly fold.

blown rose,

Flushing his brow, and in his pained
heart

Made purple riot. Ib. st. 16

A poor, weak, palsy-stricken, church-yard thing.

Poems. The Eve of St. Agnes,
st. 18

As though a tongueless nightingale should swell

Her throat in vain, and die, heart-stifled in her dell.
Ib. st. 23

Full on this casement shone the wintry moon,

And threw warm gules on Madeline's fair breast.
Ib. st. 25

Uncclasps her warmed jewels one by one;

Loosens her fragrant bodice; by degrees

Her rich attire creeps rustling to her knees.

My heart aches, and a drowsy numbness pains

My sense, as though of hemlock I had drunk,

Or emptied some dull opiate to the drains

One minute past, and Lethe-wards had sunk.¹

O, for a beaker full of the warm South, Full of the true, the blushful Hippocrene,

With beaded bubbles winking at the brim,

And purple-stained mouth.

Poems. Ode to a Nightingale,
st. 2

Fade far away, dissolve, and quite forget

What thou among the leaves hast never known,

The weariness, the fever, and the fret Here, where men sit and hear each other groan;

Where palsy shakes a few, sad, last gray hairs,

Where youth grows pale, and specter-thin, and dies;

Where but to think is to be full of sorrow

And leaden-eyed despairs.

Ib. st. 3

Already with thee! tender is the night.
Ib. st. 4

I cannot see what flowers are at my feet,

Nor what soft incense hangs upon the boughs,

But, in embalmed darkness, guess each sweet.
Ib. st. 5

The murmurous haunt of flies on summer eves.
Ib.

Darkling I listen; and, for many a time I have been half in love with easeful Death,

Call'd him soft names in many a mused rhyme,

To take into the air my quiet breath; Now more than ever seems it rich to die,

To cease upon the midnight with no pain,

While thou art pouring forth thy soul abroad

In such an ecstasy!

Still wouldst thou sing, and I have ears in vain —

To thy high requiem become a sod.

Ib. st. 6

Thou wast not born for death, immortal Bird!

No hungry generations tread thee down;

The voice I hear this passing night was heard

In ancient days by emperor and clown:
Perhaps the self-same song that found a path

Through the sad heart of Ruth, when,
sick for home,

She stood in tears amid the alien corn;
The same that oft-times hath Charm'd magic casements, opening on the foam

Of perilous seas, in faery lands forlorn.

Poems. Ode to a Nightingale,
st. 7

Forlorn! the very word is like a bell
To toll me back from thee to my sole self!

Ib. st. 8

Was it a vision, or a waking dream?
Fled is that music: — Do I wake or sleep?

Ib.

Thou still unravish'd bride of quietness,
Thou foster-child of silence and slow
time,

Sylvan historian, who canst thus express

A flowery tale more sweetly than our rhyme:

What leaf-fring'd legend haunts about thy shape?

Ib. Ode on a Grecian Urn, st. 1

What men or gods are these? What maidens loth?

What mad pursuit? What struggle to escape?

What pipes and timbrels? What wild ecstasy?

Ib.

Heard melodies are sweet, but those unheard

Are sweeter.

Ib. st. 2

Forever wilt thou love, and she be fair!

Ib.

Forever piping songs forever new.

Ib. st. 3

Who are these coming to the sacrifice?
To what green altar, O mysterious priest,

Lead'st thou that heifer lowing at the skies,

And all her silken flanks with garlands
drest?

Poems. Ode on a Grecian Urn, st. 4

O Attic shape! Fair attitude!

Have ye souls in heaven too?

*Ib. Ode written on the blank page before BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Fair Maid of Souls of Poets dead and gone,

What Elysium have ye known,
Happy field or mossy cavern, Choicer than the Mermaid Tavern?
Have ye tippled drink more fine
Than mine host's Canary wine?

Ib. Lines on the Mermaid Tavern

Season of mists and mellow fruitful-
ness,

If asked who said "Beauty is truth, truth beauty!" a great many readers would answer "Keats." But Keats said nothing of the sort. It is what he said the Grecian Urn said, his description and criticism of a certain kind of work of art, the kind from which the evils and problems of this life, the "heart high sorrowful and cloyed," are deliberately excluded. The Urn, for example, depicts, among other beautiful sights, the citadel of a hill town; it does not depict warfare, the evil which makes the citadel necessary. — W. H. Poems. To Autumn, st. 1

Who hath not seen thee oft amid thy store?

Sometimes whoever seeks abroad may find

Thee sitting careless on a granary floor, Thy hair soft-lifted by the winnowing wind;

Or on a half-reap'd furrow sound asleep,

Drows'd with the fume of poppies
while thy hook

Spares the next swath and all its twined flowers. Ib. st. 2

Then in a wailful choir the small gnats mourn

Among the river salallows. Ib. st. 3

No, no, go not to Lethe, neither twist

She dwells with Beauty — Beauty that must die. Ib. st. 3

Ay, in the very temple of Delight
Veil'd Melancholy has her sovran

Though seen of none save him whose strenuous tongue

Can burst Joy's grape against his palate

His soul shall taste the sadness of her might,

And be among her cloudy trophies

I am certain of nothing but the holiness of the heart's affections and the truth of imagination — what the imagination seizes as beauty must be truth — whether it existed before or not.

Letter to Benjamin Bailey
[November 22, 1817]

The imagination may be compared found it truth. Ib.

O for a life of Sensations rather than of Thoughts! Ib.

I scarcely remember counting upon happiness — I look not for it if it be not in the present hour — nothing startles me beyond the moment. The setting sun will always set me to rights — or if a sparrow come before my window I take part in its existence and pick about the gravel. Ib.

At once it struck me what quality went to form a man of achievement, especially in literature, and which Shakespeare possessed so enormously — I mean negative capability, that is, when a man is capable of being in uncertainties, mysteries, doubts, without any irritable reaching after fact and reason.

Letter to George and Thomas
Keats [December 22, 1817]

We hate poetry that has a palpable design upon us — and if we do not agree, seems to put its hand in its breeches pocket. Poetry should be great and unobtrusive, a thing which enters into one's soul, and does not startle or amaze with itself, but with its subject.

Letter to John Hamilton Reynolds [February 3, 1818]

Poetry should surprise by a fine excess, and not by singularity. It should strike the reader as a wording of his own highest thoughts, and appear almost as a remembrance.

Letter to John Taylor [February 27, 1818]

If poetry comes not as naturally as leaves to a tree it had better not come at all. Ib.

Scenery is fine — but human nature is finer.

Letter to Benjamin Bailey [March 13, 1818]

Axioms in philosophy are not axioms until they are proved upon our pulses: we read fine things but never feel them to the full until we have gone the same steps as the author.

Letter to John Hamilton Reynolds [May 3, 1818]

I compare human life to a large mansion of many apartments, two of which I can only describe, the doors of the rest being as yet shut upon me. Ib.

There is an awful warmth about my heart like a load of immortality.

Letter to John Hamilton Reynolds [September 22, 1818]

I begin to get a little acquainted with my own strength and weakness. Praise or blame has but a momentary effect on the man whose love of beauty in the abstract makes him a severe critic on his own works.

Letter to James Hessey [October 9, 1818]

The genius of poetry must work out its own salvation in a man; it cannot be matured by law and precept, but by sensation and watchfulness in itself. That which is creative must create itself —

In Endymion, I leaped headlong into the sea, and thereby have become better acquainted with the soundings, the quicksands, and the rocks, than if I had stayed upon the green shore, and piped a silly pipe, and took tea and comfortable advice.

Letter to James Hessey

I would sooner fail than not be among the greatest. Ib.

I think I shall be among the English Poets after my death.

Letter to George and Georgiana Keats [October 14, 1818]

The poetical character . . . is not itself — it has no self — it is everything and nothing. . . . It has as much delight in conceiving an Iago as an Imogen.

Letter to Richard Woodhouse [October 27, 1818]

A poet is the most unpoetical of anything in existence; because he has no identity — he is continually infor[m]ing — and filling some other body. Ib.

A man's life of any worth is a continual allegory — and very few eyes can see the mystery of his life — a life like the Scriptures, figurative. . . . Lord Byron cuts a figure, but he is not figurative. Shakespeare led a life of allegory: his works are the comments on it.

Letter to George and Georgiana Keats [February 14–May 3, 1819]

Nothing ever becomes real till it is experienced — Even a proverb is no proverb to you till your Life has illustrated it. Ib.

I myself am pursuing the same instinctive course as the veriest human animal you can think of — I am, however young, writing at random — straining at particles of light in the midst of a great darkness — without knowing the bearing of any one assertion, of any one opinion. Yet may I not in this be free from sin?

Ib. [April 21, 1819]

To Fanny Brawne [July 25, 1819]

"If I should die," said I to myself, "I have left no immortal work behind me — nothing to make my friends proud of my memory — but I have lov'd the principle of beauty in all things, and if I had had time I would have made myself remember'd."

Ib. [c. February 1820]

You might curb your magnanimity, and be more of an artist, and load every rift of your subject with ore.

What, then, must have been the emotions of the Spaniards, when, after working their toilsome way into the upper air, the cloudy tabernacle parted before their eyes, and they beheld these fair scenes [the valley and city of Mexico] in all their pristine magnificence and beauty! It was like the spectacle which greeted the eyes of Moses from the summit of Pisgah, and, in the warm glow of their feelings, they cried out, "It is the promised land!"

The Conquest of Peru [1847],
bk. I, ch. 5

Drawing his sword he [Pizarro] traced a line with it on the sand from East to West. Then, turning towards the South, "Friends and comrades!" he said, "on that side are toil, hunger, nakedness, the drenching storm, desertion, and death; on this side ease and pleasure.¹ There lies Peru with its riches here, Panama and its poverty. Choose, each man, what best becomes a brave Castilian. For my part, I go to the South." So saying, he stepped across the line.

'Tis the good reader that makes the good book; in every book he finds passages which seem confidences or asides hidden from all else and unmistakably meant for his ear; the profit of books is according to the sensibility of the reader; the profoundest thought or passion sleeps as in a mine, until it is discovered by an equal mind and heart.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE

1804-1864

Amid the seeming confusion of our mysterious world, individuals are so nicely adjusted to a system, and systems to one another and to a whole, that, by stepping aside for a moment, a man exposes himself to a fearful risk of losing his place forever.

Wakefield [1835]

His hour is one of darkness, and adversity, and peril. But should domestic tyranny oppress us, or the invader's step pollute our soil, still may the Gray Champion come, for he is the type of New England's hereditary spirit; and his shadowy march, on the eve of danger, must ever be the pledge, that New England's sons will vindicate their ancestry.

The Gray Champion [1835]

By the sympathy of your human hearts for sin ye shall scent out all the places — whether in church, bedchamber, street, field, or forest — where crime has been committed, and shall exult to behold the whole earth one stain of guilt, one mighty blood spot.

Young Goodman Brown [1835]

As the moral gloom of the world overpowers all systematic gaiety, even so was their home of wild mirth made desolate amid the sad forest.

The Maypole of Merry Mount [1836]

"What is the Unpardonable Sin?" asked the lime-burner. . . .

"It is a sin that grew within my own breast," replied Ethan Brand. . . . The sin of an intellect that triumphed over the sense of brotherhood with man and reverence for God."

Ethan Brand [1850]

On the breast of her gown, in red cloth, surrounded with an elaborate embroidery and fantastic flourishes of gold thread, appeared the letter A.

The Scarlet Letter [1850],
ch. 2

There is a fatality, a feeling so irresistible and inevitable that it has the force of doom, which almost invariably compels human beings to linger around and haunt, ghostlike, the spot where some great and marked event has given the color to their lifetime; and still the more irresistibly, the darker the tinge that saddens it.

The Scarlet Letter, ch. 5

Wherever there is a heart and an intellect, the diseases of the physical frame are tinged with the peculiarities of these.

Ib. 9

Let men tremble to win the hand of woman, unless they win along with it the utmost passion of her heart.

Ib. 15

Ib. 17

The scarlet letter was her passport into regions where other women dared not tread. Shame, Despair, Solitude! These had been her teachers—stern and wild ones—and they had made her strong, but taught her much amiss.

Ib. 18

No man, for any considerable period, can wear one face to himself, and another to the multitude, without finally getting bewildered as to which may be the true.

Ib. 20

Among many morals which press upon us from the poor minister's miserable experience, we put only this into a sentence: "Be true! Be true! Show freely to the world, if not your worst, yet some trait whereby the worst may be inferred."

Ib. 24

The book, if you would see anything in it, requires to be read in the clear, brown, twilight atmosphere in which it was written; if opened in the sunshine, it is apt to look exceedingly like a volume of blank pages.

Ib. 21

The greatest obstacle to being heroic is the doubt whether one may not be going to prove one's self a fool; the truest heroism is, to resist the doubt; and the profoundest wisdom, to know when it ought to be resisted, and when to be obeyed.

The Blithedale Romance [1852], ch. 2

I am a woman, with every fault, it may be, that a woman ever had—weak, vain, unprincipled (like most of my sex; for our virtues, when we have any, are merely impulsive and intuitive).

Ib. 25

It is because the spirit is inestimable that the lifeless body is so little valued.

Ib. 28

In youth men are apt to write more wisely than they really know or feel; and the remainder of life may be not idly spent in realizing and convincing themselves of the wisdom they uttered long ago.

The Snow Image [1852], preface

No author, without a trial, can conceive of the difficulty of writing a romance about a country where there is no shadow, no antiquity, no mystery, no picturesque and gloomy wrong, nor anything but a commonplace prosperity, in broad and simple daylight, as is happily the case with my dear native land. . . . Romance and poetry, ivy, lichens and wallflowers need ruin to make them grow.

Democracy in America,¹ pt. I
[1835], ch. 3

Within these limits the power vested in the American courts of justice of pronouncing a statute to be unconstitutional forms one of the most powerful barriers that have ever been devised against the tyranny of political assemblies.

Ib. 6

I have never been more struck by the good sense and the practical judgment of the Americans than in the manner in which they elude the numberless difficulties resulting from their Federal Constitution.

Ib. 8

In this question, therefore, there is no medium between servitude and license; in order to enjoy the inestimable benefits that the liberty of the press ensures, it is necessary to submit to the inevitable evils that it creates.

Ib. 9

They [the Americans] have all a lively faith in the perfectibility of man, they judge that the diffusion of knowledge must necessarily be advantageous, and the consequences of ignorance fatal; they all consider society as a body in a state of improvement, humanity as a changing scene, in which nothing is, or ought to be, permanent; and they admit that what appears to them today to be good, may be superseded by something better tomorrow.

Ib. 18

America is a land of wonders, in which everything is in constant motion and every change seems an improvement. The idea of novelty is there indissolubly connected with the idea of amelioration. No natural boundary seems to be set to the efforts of man; and in his eyes what is not yet done is only what he has not yet attempted to do.

Ib.

Democratic nations care but little for what has been, but they are haunted by visions of what will be; in this direction their unbounded imagination grows and dilates beyond all measure. . . . Democracy, which shuts the past against the poet, opens the future before him.

Democracy in America, pt. II
[1840], bk. I, ch. 17

Thus not only does democracy make every man forget his ancestors, but it hides his descendants and separates his contemporaries from him; it throws him back forever upon himself alone and threatens in the end to confine him entirely within the solitude of his own heart.

Ib. bk. II, ch. 2

If I were asked . . . to what the singular prosperity and growing strength of that people [the Americans] ought mainly to be attributed, I should reply: To the superiority of their women.

Ib. bk. III, ch. 12

The love of wealth is therefore to be traced, as either a principal or accessory motive, at the bottom of all that the Americans do; this gives to all their passions a sort of family likeness. . . . It may be said that it is the vehemence of their desires that makes the Americans so methodical; it perturbs their minds, but it disciplines their lives.

Liberty [1859], introduction

If all mankind minus one, were of one opinion, and only one person were of the contrary opinion, mankind would be no more justified in silencing that one person, than he, if he had the power, would be justified in silencing mankind. Ib. ch. 2

Tell me not, in mournful numbers,

Life is but an empty dream!

For the soul is dead that slumbers,

And things are not what they seem.¹

Life is real! Life is earnest!

And the grave is not its goal;

Dust thou art, to dust returnest,

Was not spoken of the soul.

A Psalm of Life [1839], st. 1, 2

Art is long, and Time is fleeting,²

And our hearts, though stout and brave,

Still, like muffled drums, are beating

Funeral marches to the grave.³

Ib. st. 4

Trust no Future, howe'er pleasant!

Let the dead Past bury its dead!⁴

Act — act in the living present!

Heart within, and God o'erhead!

Lives of great men all remind us

We can make our lives sublime,

And, departing, leave behind us

Footprints on the sands of time.

CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN

1809-1882

I have called this principle, by which each slight variation, if useful, is preserved, by the term Natural Selection.

The Origin of Species [1859],
ch. 3

The expression often used by Mr. Herbert Spencer, of the Survival of the Fittest, is more accurate, and is sometimes equally convenient.¹

The Origin of Species, ch. 3

We will now discuss in a little more detail the Struggle for Existence.²

Ib.

It is interesting to contemplate an entangled bank, clothed with many plants of many kinds, with birds singing on the bushes, with various insects flitting about, and with worms crawling through the damp earth, and to reflect that these elaborately constructed forms, so different from each other, and dependent on each other in so complex a manner, have all been produced by laws acting around us.

Ib.

The highest possible stage in moral culture is when we recognize that we ought to control our thoughts.

The Descent of Man [1871],
ch. 4

The presence of a body of well-constructed men, who have not to labor for their daily bread, is important to a degree which cannot be overestimated; as all high intellectual work is carried on by them, and on such work material progress of all kinds mainly depends, not to mention other and higher advantages.

Ib. 5

Progress has been much more general than retrogression.

Ib.

The Simiadae then branched off into two great stems, the New World and Old World monkeys; and from the latter at a remote period, Man, the wonder and the glory of the universe, proceeded.³

Ib. 6

¹ This survival of the fittest which I have here sought to express in mechanical terms, is that which Mr. Darwin has called "natural selection, or the preservation of favored races in the struggle for life." — HERBERT SPENCER, Principles of Biology [1864–1867], Indirect Equilibration

² The perpetual struggle for room and food. — MALTHUS, On Population [1798], ch. 3

³ I confess freely to you, I could never look long upon a monkey, without very mortifying reflections. — CONGREVE, Letter to Dennis [1695]

See Disraeli, p. 612b.

Man scans with scrupulous care the character and pedigree of his horses, cattle, and dogs before he matches them; but when he comes to his own marriage he rarely, or never, takes any such care.

The Descent of Man, ch. 21

For my own part I would as soon be descended from that heroic little monkey, who braved his dreaded enemy in order to save the life of his keeper; or from that old baboon, who, descending from the mountains, carried away in triumph his young comrade from a crowd of astonished dogs — as from a savage who delights to torture his enemies, offers up bloody sacrifices, practices infanticide without remorse, treats his wives like slaves, knows no decency, and is haunted by the grossest superstitions.

Ib.

The plow is one of the most ancient and most valuable of man's inventions; but long before he existed the land was in fact regularly plowed, and still continues to be thus plowed by earthworms. It may be doubted whether there are many other animals which have played so important a part in the history of the world, as have these lowly organized creatures.

The Formation of Vegetable Mold Through the Action of Worms [1881], ch. 7

Physiological experiment on animals is justifiable for real investigation, but not for mere damnable and detestable curiosity.

Letter to E. Ray Lankester

As for a future life, every man must judge for himself between conflicting vague probabilities.

From Life and Letters of Charles Darwin, edited by FRANCIS DARWIN [1887]

I love fools' experiments. I am always making them.

Ib.

Believing as I do that man in the distant future will be a far more perfect creature than he now is, it is an intolerable thought that he and all other sentient beings are doomed to complete annihilation after such long-continued slow progress. To those who fully admit the immortality of the human soul, the destruction of our world will not appear so dreadful.

Dead Souls [1842], vol. I, ch. 11

Rus! Rus! I see you, from my lovely enchanted remoteness I see you: a country of dinginess, and bleakness and dispersal; no arrogant wonders of nature crowned by the arrogant wonders of art appear within you to delight or terrify the eyes. . . . So what is the incomprehensible secret force driving me towards you? Why do I constantly hear the echo of your mournful song as it is carried from sea to sea through your entire expanse? . . . And since you are without end yourself, is it not within you that a boundless thought will be born? ¹

Oh troika, winged troika, tell me who invented you? Surely, nowhere but among a nimble nation could you have been born: in a country which has taken itself in earnest and has evenly spread far and wide over half of the globe, so that once you start counting the milestones you may count on till a speckled haze dances before your eyes. . . .

Rus, are you not similar in your headlong motion to one of those nimble troikas that none can overtake? The flying road turns into smoke under you, bridges thunder and pass, all falls back and is left behind! . . . And what does this awesome motion mean? What is the passing strange force contained in these passing strange steeds? Steeds, steeds, what steeds! Has the whirlwind a home in your manes? . . . Rus, whither are you speeding so? Answer me. No answer. The middle bell trills out in a dream its liquid soliloquy; the roaring air is torn to pieces and becomes wind; all things on earth fly by and other nations and states gaze askance as they step aside and give her the right of way.¹

Ib. vol. I, concluding paragraphs

In the course of the reading he [Pushkin] became more and more melancholy and finally became completely gloomy. When the reading was over he uttered in a voice full of sorrow: "Goodness, how sad is our Russia!"

I am not a Know-Nothing; that is certain. How could I be? How can anyone who abhors the oppression of Negroes be in favor of degrading classes of white people? We now practically read it "all men are created equal, except Negroes." When the Know-Nothings get control, it will read "all men are created equal, except Negroes and foreigners and Catholics." roused will not turn and rend you? What constitutes the bulwark of our own liberty and independence? It is not our frowning battlements, our bristling sea coasts, our army and our navy. These are not our reliance against tyranny. All of those may be turned against us without making us weaker for the struggle. Our reliance is in the love of liberty which God has planted in us. Our defense is in the spirit which prized liberty as the heritage of all men, in all lands everywhere. Destroy this spirit and you have planted the seeds of despotism at your own doors. Familiarize yourselves with the chains of bondage and you prepare your own limbs to wear them. Accustomed to trample on the rights of others, you have lost the genius of your own independence and become the fit subjects of the first cunning tyrant who rises among you.¹

Speech, Edwardsville, Illinois
[September 11, 1858]

That is the issue that will continue in this country when these poor tongues of Judge Douglas and myself shall be silent. It is the eternal struggle between these two principles — right and wrong — throughout the world. They are the two principles that have stood face to face from the beginning of time; and will ever continue to struggle. The one is the common right of humanity, and the other the divine right of kings. It is the same principle in whatever shape it develops itself. It is the same spirit that says, "You toil and work and earn bread, and I'll eat it." No matter in what shape it comes, whether from the mouth of a king who seeks to bestride the people of his own nation and live by the fruit of their labor, or from one race of men as an apology for enslaving another race, it is the same tyrannical principle.

[September 30, 1859]

What is conservatism? Is it not adherence to the old and tried, against the new and untried?

Address, Cooper Union, New York [February 27, 1860]

Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it. Ib.

No one, not in my situation, can appreciate my feeling of sadness at this parting. To this place, and the kindness of these people, I owe everything. Here I have lived a quarter of a century, and have passed from a young to an old man. Here my children have been born, and one is buried. I now leave, not knowing when or whether ever I may return, with a task before me greater than that which rested upon Washington. Without the assistance of that Divine Being who ever attended him, I cannot succeed. With that assistance I cannot fail. Trusting in Him who can go with me, and remain with you, and be everywhere for good, let us confidently hope that all will yet be well.

Farewell Address, Springfield, Illinois [February 11, 1861]

If we do not make common cause to save the good old ship of the Union on this voyage, nobody will have a chance to pilot her on another voyage.

Address, Cleveland, Ohio
[February 15, 1861]

I have never had a feeling, politically, that did not spring from the sentiments embodied in the Declaration of Independence. . . . I have often inquired of myself what great principle or idea it was that kept this Confederacy so long together. It was not the mere matter of separation of the colonies from the motherland, but that sentiment in the Declaration of Independence which gave liberty not alone to the people of this country, but hope to all the world, for all future time. It was that which gave promise that in due time the weights would be lifted from the shoulders of all men, and that all should have an equal chance. This is the sentiment embodied in the Declaration of Independence. . . . I would rather be assassinated on this spot than surrender it.

Speech, Independence Hall, Philadelphia [February 22, 1861]

It is safe to assert that no government proper ever had a provision in its organic law for its own termination.

First Inaugural Address
[March 4, 1861]

If by the mere force of numbers a majority should deprive a minority of any clearly written constitutional right, it might, in a moral point of view, justify revolution — certainly would if such a right were a vital one. Ib.

This country, with its institutions, belongs to the people who inhabit it. Whenever they shall grow weary of the existing government, they can exercise their constitutional right of amending it, or their revolutionary right to dismember or overthrow it. Ib.

Why should there not be a patient confidence in the ultimate justice of the people? Is there any better or equal hope in the world?

First Inaugural Address

While the people retain their virtue and vigilance, no administration, by any extreme of wickedness or folly, can very seriously injure the government in the short space of four years. Ib.

We are not enemies, but friends. We must not be enemies. Though passion may have strained, it must not break, our bonds of affection. The mystic chords of memory, stretching from every battlefield and patriot grave to every living heart and hearthstone all over this broad land, will yet swell the chorus of the Union when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our nature. Ib.

I think the necessity of being ready increases. Look to it.

Letter (this is the whole message) to Governor Andrew G. Curtin of Pennsylvania [April 8, 1861]

Labor is prior to, and independent of, capital. Capital is only the fruit of labor, and could never have existed if labor had not first existed. Labor is the superior of capital, and deserves much the higher consideration. Capital has its rights, which are as worthy of protection as any other rights.¹

First Annual Message to Congress [December 3, 1861]

It is difficult to make a man miserable while he feels he is worthy of himself and claims kindred to the great God who made him.

Address on colonization to a Negro deputation at Washington [August 14, 1862]

My paramount object in this struggle is to save the Union, and is not either to save or to destroy slavery. If I could save the Union without freeing any slave, I would do it; and if I could save it by freeing all the slaves, I would do it; and if I could do it by freeing some and leaving others alone, I would also do that.

Letter to Horace Greeley
[August 22, 1862]

I shall try to correct errors when shown to be errors; and I shall adopt new views so fast as they shall appear to be true views. . . . I intend no modification of my oft-expressed personal wish that all men, everywhere, could be free. Ib.

On the first day of January in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, all persons held as slaves within any state, or designated part of a state, the people whereof shall then be in rebellion against the United States shall be then, thenceforward, and forever free.

Preliminary¹ Emancipation Proclamation [September 22, 1862]

The President takes the result of the New York elections² philosophically, and will, doubtless, profit by the lesson. When Colonel Forney inquired of him how he felt about New York, he replied: "Somewhat like the boy in Kentucky, who stubbed his toe while running to see his sweetheart. The boy said he was too big to cry, and far too badly hurt to laugh."

Frank Leslie's Illustrated Weekly
[November 22, 1862]

A nation may be said to consist of its territory, its people, and its laws. The territory is the only part which is of certain durability.

Second Annual Message to Congress [December 1, 1862]

If there ever could be a proper time for mere catch arguments, that time surely is not now. In times like the present, men should utter nothing for which they would not willingly be responsible through time and in eternity.

Second Annual Message to Congress

The dogmas of the quiet past are inadequate to the stormy present. The occasion is piled high with difficulty, and we must rise with the occasion. As our case is new, so we must think anew and act anew. We must disenthrall ourselves, and then we shall save our country.

Fellow citizens, we cannot escape history. We of this Congress and this administration will be remembered in spite of ourselves. No personal significance or insignificance can spare one or another of us. The fiery trial through which we pass will light us down in honor or dishonor to the last generation. We say we are for the Union. The world will not forget that we say this. We know how to save the Union. The world knows we do know how to save it. We, even we here, hold the power and bear the responsibility. In giving freedom to the slave, we assure freedom to the free — honorable alike in what we give and what we preserve. We shall nobly save or meanly lose the last, best hope of earth. Other means may succeed; this could not fail. The way is plain, peaceful, generous, just — a way which if followed the world will forever applaud and God must forever bless.

[August 26, 1863]

I have endured a great deal of ridicule without much malice; and have received a great deal of kindness, not quite free from ridicule. I am used to it.

Letter to James H. Hackett
[November 2, 1863]

Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent, a new nation, conceived in Liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation or any nation so conceived and so dedicated can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field, as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate—we cannot consecrate—we cannot hallow—this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.¹

Address at Gettysburg [November 19, 1863]

The President last night had a dream. He was in a party of plain people and as it became known who he was they began to comment on his appearance. One of them said, "He is a common-looking man." The President replied, "Common-looking people are the best in the world: that is the reason the Lord makes so many of them."

I claim not to have controlled events, but confess plainly that events have controlled me.

Letter to A. G. Hodges
[April 4, 1864]

The world has never had a good definition of the word liberty. And the American people just now are much in want of one. We all declare for liberty; but in using the same word we do not mean the same thing. With some, the word liberty may mean for each man to do as he pleases with himself and the product of his labor; while with others the same word may mean for some men to do as they please with other men and the product of other men's labor. Here are two, not only different, but incompatible things, called by the same name, liberty. And it follows that each of the things is by the respective parties called by two different and incompatible names, liberty and tyranny.

The shepherd drives the wolf from the sheep's throat, for which the sheep thanks the shepherd as his liberator, while the wolf denounces him for the same act. . . . Plainly the sheep and the wolf are not agreed upon a definition of liberty.

Address, Sanitary Fair, Baltimore [April 18, 1864]

I do not allow myself to suppose that either the convention or the League have concluded to decide that I am either the greatest or best man in America, but rather they have concluded that it is not best to swap horses while crossing the river, and have further concluded that I am not so poor a horse

Letter to Secretary Stanton, refusing to dismiss Postmaster-General Montgomery Blair [July 18, 1864]

It has long been a grave question whether any government, not too strong for the liberties of its people, can be strong enough to maintain its existence in great emergencies.

Response to a serenade [November 10, 1864]

Human nature will not change. In any future great national trial, compared with the men of this, we shall have as weak and as strong, as silly and as wise, as bad and as good. Ib.

I desire so to conduct the affairs of this administration that if at the end, when I come to lay down the reins of power, I have lost every other friend on earth, I shall at least have one friend left, and that friend shall be down inside me.

Reply to Missouri Committee of Seventy [1864]

Dear Madam, I have been shown in the files of the War Department a statement of the Adjutant-General of Massachusetts that you are the mother of five¹ sons who have died gloriously on the field of battle. I feel how weak and fruitless must be any words of mine which should attempt to beguile you from the grief of a loss so overwhelming. But I cannot refrain from tendering to you the consolation that may be found in the thanks of the Republic they died to save. I pray that our heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement, and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost, and the solemn pride that must be

Letter to Mrs. Bixby [November 21, 1864]

It may seem strange that any men should dare to ask a just God's assistance in wringing their bread from the sweat of other men's faces,¹ but let us judge not, that we be not judged.²

Second Inaugural Address [March 4, 1865]

The Almighty has His own purposes. Ib.

Fondly do we hope, fervently do we pray, that this mighty scourge of war may speedily pass away. Yet, if God wills that it continue until all the wealth piled by the bondsman's two hundred and fifty years of unrequited toil shall be sunk, and until every drop of blood drawn with the lash shall be paid by another drawn with the sword, as was said three thousand years ago, so still it must be said, "The judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether."³

With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right,⁴ let us strive on to finish the work we are in, to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle and for his widow and his orphan, to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations. Ib.

I have always thought that all men should be free; but if any should be slaves, it should be first those who desire it for themselves, and secondly those who desire it for others. Whenever I hear anyone arguing for slavery, I feel a strong impulse to see it tried on him personally.⁵

Poems [1831]. Preface, Letter to
Mr. B —

Helen, thy beauty is to me
Like those Nicean barks of yore,
That gently, o'er a perfumed sea,
The weary, wayworn wanderer bore
To his own native shore.

On desperate seas long wont to roam,
Thy hyacinth hair, thy classic face,
Thy Naiad airs have brought me home
To the glory that was Greece,
And the grandeur that was Rome.

With me poetry has been not a pur-should be held in reverence: they must not — they cannot at will be excited, with an eye to the paltry compensations, or the more paltry commendations, of mankind.

The Raven and Other Poems
 [1845], preface

Once upon a midnight dreary, while I pondered, weak and weary,
 Over many a quaint and curious volume of forgotten lore —
 While I nodded, nearly napping, suddenly there came a tapping,
 As of some one gently rapping, rapping at my chamber door.

The Raven [1845], st. 1

Ah, distinctly I remember it was in the bleak December;

And each ^o separate dying ember wrought its ghost upon the floor.
 Eagerly I wished the morrow; vainly I

The Philosophy of Composition
 [1846]

I asked myself — "Of all melancholy topics, what, according to the universal understanding of mankind, is the most melancholy?" Death — was the obvious reply. "And when," I said, "is this most melancholy of topics most poetical?"

. . . The answer . . . is obvious —
 "When it most closely allies itself to Beauty: the death, then, of a beautiful woman is, unquestionably, the most poetical topic in the world — and equally is it beyond doubt that the lips best suited for such topic are those of a bereaved lover." Ib.

 Or at the casement seen her stand?

Or is she known in all the land,
 The Lady of Shalott? Ib. st. 3

All in the blue unclouded weather.
Ib. III, st. 3

"Tirra lirra," by the river
 Sang Sir Lancelot. Ib. st. 4

She left the web, she left the loom,
 She made three paces thro' the room,
 She saw the water lily bloom,
 She saw the helmet and the plume,
 She look'd down to Camelot.

Out flew the web and floated wide;
The mirror cracked from side to side.
"The curse has come upon me," cried
The Lady of Shalott.

The Lady of Shalott,
pt. III, st. 5

But Lancelot mused a little space;
He said, "She has a lovely face;
God in his mercy lend her grace,
The Lady of Shalott."

Ib. IV, st. 6

God gives us love. Something to love
He lends us; but when love is grown
To ripeness, that on which it throve Falls off, and love is left alone.

Love and Duty [1842], l. 17

Ah! when shall all men's good Be each man's rule, and universal peace

Lie like a shaft of light across the land,
And like a lane of beams athwart the
sea,

Through all the circle of the golden
year?

The Golden Year [1842], l. 47

It little profits that an idle king,
By this still hearth, among these barren

Saw the Vision of the world, and all the wonder that would be;

Saw the heavens fill with commerce,
argosies of magic sails,

Pilots of the purple twilight, dropping down with costly bales;

Heard the heavens fill with shouting,
and there rain'd a ghastly dew

From the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue.

Break, break, break,
 On thy cold gray stones, O Sea!
 And I would that my tongue could utter

The thoughts that arise in me.

O well for the fisherman's boy,
 That he shouts with his sister at play!

O well for the sailor lad,
 That he sings in his boat on the bay!

And the stately ships go on
 To their haven under the hill;

But O for the touch of a vanish'd

The Princess, pt. III [song,
Sweet and Low, st. 1]

The splendor falls on castle walls

And snowy summits old in story:

The long light shakes across the lakes,

And the wild cataract leaps in glory.

Blow, bugle, blow, set the wild echoes flying,

Blow, bugle; answer, echoes, dying, dying, dying.

Ib. IV [song, The Splendor Falls,
 st. 1]

The horns of Elfland faintly blowing.

Ib. [st. 2]

O Love, they die in yon rich sky,

They faint on hill or field or river:

Our echoes roll from soul to soul,

And grow forever and forever.

Ib. [st. 3]

Tears, idle tears, I know not what they mean,

Tears from the depth of some divine despair

Rise in the heart, and gather to the eyes,

In looking on the happy autumn fields,
 And thinking of the days that are no
 more.

Ib. [song, Tears, Idle Tears, st. 1]

Dear as remember'd kisses after death,
 And sweet as those by hopeless fancy
 feign'd

On lips that are for others; deep as love, Deep as first love, and wild with all regret;

O Death in Life, the days that are no
 more.

 son Petal, st. 1]*

Now lies the Earth all Danaë to the stars,
 And all thy heart lies open unto me.
Ib. [st. 3]

Sweet is every sound, Sweeter thy voice, but every sound is
 sweet;
 Myriads of rivulets hurrying through the lawn,

The moan of doves in immemorial
 elms,
 And murmuring of innumerable bees.
The Princess, pt. VII, l. 203

Happy he
 With such a mother! faith in woman-kind Beats with his blood, and trust in all things high Comes easy to him; and though he trip
 and fall,
 He shall not blind his soul with clay.

Parody

This high man, with a great thing to pursue,

Dies ere he knows it.

That low man goes on adding one to one,

His hundred's soon hit;

This high man, aiming at a million,
Misses an unit.

That, has the world here — should he need the next,

Let the world mind him!

This, throws himself on God, and un-perplexed

Seeking shall find Him.

Great men may be compared to torches shining at long intervals, to guide the advance of science. They light up their time, either by discovering unexpected and fertile phenomena which open up new paths and reveal unknown horizons, or by generalizing acquired scientific facts and disclosing truths which their predecessors had not perceived.

GREENE [1926].

We may, of course, strike a balance between what a living organism takes in as nourishment and what it gives out in excretions; but the results would be mere statistics incapable of throwing light on the inmost phenomena of nutrition in living beings. According to a Dutch chemist's phrase, this would be like trying to tell what happens inside a house by watching what goes in by the door and what comes out by the chimney.

st. 1

When all the world is young, lad,
And all the trees are green;
And every goose a swan, lad,
And every lass a queen;
Then hey for boot and horse, lad,
And round the world away:
Young blood must have its course, lad,
And every dog his day.²

Oh, give me again the rover's life — the joy, the thrill, the whirl! Let me feel thee again, old seal let me leap into thy saddle once more. I am sick of these terra-firma toils and cares; sick of the dust and reek of towns. Let me hear the clatter of hailstones on icebergs, and not the dull tramp of these plodders, plodding their dull way from their cradles to their graves. Let me snuff thee up, sea breeze! and whinny in thy spray. Forbid it, sea gods! intercede for me with Neptune, O sweet Amphitrite,¹ that no dull clod may fall on my coffin! Be mine the tomb that swallowed up Pharaoh and all his hosts; let me lie down with Drake where he sleeps in the sea. Ib. 19

Yes, as everyone knows, meditation and water are wedded forever . . . Why did the old Persians hold the sea holy? Why did the Greeks give it a separate deity, and own brother of Jove? Surely all this is not without meaning.

And still deeper the meaning of that story of Narcissus, who because he could not grasp the tormenting, mild image he saw in the fountain, plunged into it and was drowned. But that same image, we ourselves see in all rivers and oceans. It is the image of the ungraspable phantom of life; and this is the key to it all. Moby-Dick, ch. 1

But oh! shipmates! on the starboard hand of every woe, there is a sure delight; and higher the top of that delight, than the bottom of the woe is deep. Is not the main-truck higher than the kelson is low? Delight is to him—a far, far upward, and inward delight—who against the proud gods and commodores of this earth, ever stands forth his own inexorable self. Ib. 9

And eternal delight and deliciousness will be his, who coming to lay him down, can say with his final breath—O Father!—chiefly known to me by Thy rod—mortal or immortal, here I die. I have striven to be Thine, more than to be this world's, or mine own. Yet this is nothing; I leave eternity to Thee; for what is man that he should live out the lifetime of his God? Ib.

With the landless gull, that at sunset folds her wings and is rocked to sleep between billows; so at nightfall, the Nantucketer, out of sight of land, furls his sails, and lays him to his rest, while under his very pillow rush herds of walruses and whales. Ib. 14

But when a man's religion becomes really frantic; when it is a positive torment to him; and, in fine, makes this earth of ours an uncomfortable inn to lodge in; then I think it high time to take that individual aside and argue the point with him. Ib. 17

In one word, Queequeg, said I, rather digressively; hell is an idea first born on an undigested apple dumpling;

and since then perpetuated through the hereditary dyspepsias nurtured by Ramadans. Moby-Dick, ch. 17

If, at my death, my executors, or more properly my creditors, find any precious MSS. in my desk, then here I prospectively ascribe all the honor and the glory to whaling; for a whale-ship was my Yale College and my Harvard. Ib. 24

That immaculate manliness we feel within ourselves, so far within us, that it remains intact though all the outer character seem gone; bleeds with keenest anguish at the undraped spectacle of a valor-ruined man. Ib. 26

Thou great democratic God! who didst not refuse to the swart convict, Bunyan, the pale poetic pearl; Thou who didst clothe with doubly hammered leaves of finest gold, the stumped and paupered arm of old Cervantes; Thou who didst pick up Andrew Jackson from the pebbles; who didst hurl him upon a warhorse; who didst thunder him higher than a throne! Thou who, in all Thy mighty, earthly marchings, ever cullest thy selectest champions from the kingly commons! Ib.

This it is, that forever keeps God's true princes of the Empire from the world's hustings; and leaves the highest honors that this air can give, to those men who become famous more through their infinite inferiority to the choice hidden handful of the Divine Inert, than through their undoubted superiority over the dead level of the mass. Ib. 33

All that most maddens and torments; all that stirs up the lees of things; all truth with malice in it; all that cracks the sinews and cakes the brain; all the subtle demonisms of life and thought; all evil, to crazy Ahab, were visibly personified, and made practically assailable in Moby Dick. He piled upon the whale's white hump the sum of all the general rage and hate felt by his whole race from Adam down; and then, as if his chest had been a mortar, he burst his hot heart's shell upon it.

Moby-Dick, ch. 41

For as this appalling ocean surrounds the verdant land, so in the soul of man there lies one insular Tahiti, full of peace and joy, but encompassed by all the horrors of the half known life.

O Nature, and O soul of man! how far beyond all utterance are your linked analogies! not the smallest atom stirs or lives on matter, but has its cunning duplicate in mind.

Ib. 70

So, therefore, that mortal man who hath more of joy than sorrow in him, that mortal man cannot be true — not true, or undeveloped. With books the same. The truest of all men was the Man of Sorrows, and the truest of all books is Solomon's and Ecclesiastes is the fine hammered steel of woe.

Ib. 96

Give me a condor's quill! Give me Vesuvius' crater for an inkstand! . . . To produce a mighty book, you must choose a mighty theme.

Ib. 104

Seat thyself sultanically among the moons of Saturn, and take high abstracted man alone; and he seems a wonder, a grandeur, and a woe. But from the same point, take mankind in mass, and for the most part, they seem a mob of unnecessary duplicates, both contemporary and hereditary.

Ib. 107

There is, one knows not what sweet mystery about this sea, whose gently awful stirrings seem to speak of some hidden soul beneath; like those fabled undulations of the Ephesian sod over the buried Evangelist St. John. And meet it is, that over these sea pastures, wide-rolling watery prairies and Potters' Fields of all four continents, the waves should rise and fall, and ebb and flow unceasingly; for here, millions of mixed shades and shadows, drowned dreams, somnambulisms, reveries; all that we call lives and souls, lie dreaming, dreaming, still; tossing like slumberers in their beds; the ever-rolling waves but made so by their restlessness.

Moby-Dick, ch. 111

There is no steady unretracing progress in this life; we do not advance through fixed gradations, and at the last one pause: through infancy's unconscious spell, boyhood's thoughtless faith, adolescence' doubt (the common doom), then skepticism, then disbelief, resting at last in manhood's pondering repose of If. But once gone through, we trace the round again; and are infants, boys, and men, and Ifs eternally. Where lies the final harbor, whence we unmoor no more?

Ib. 114

But if the great sun move not of himself; but is as an errand boy in heaven; nor one single star can revolve, but by some invisible power; how then can this one small heart beat; this one small brain think thoughts; unless God does that beating, does that thinking, does that living, and not I. By heaven, man, we are turned round and round in this world, like yonder windlass, and Fate is the handspike.

Ib. 132

An old, old sight, and yet somehow so young; aye, and not changed a wink since I first saw it, a boy, from the sandhills of Nantucket! The same! — the same! — the same to Noah as to me. There's a soft shower of leeward. Such lovely leewardings! They must lead somewhere — to something else than common land, more palmy than the palms.

Ib.

Now small fowls flew screaming over the yet yawning gulf; a sullen white surf beat against its steep sides; then all collapsed, and the great shroud of the sea rolled on as it rolled five thousand years ago.

Ib.

What we take to be our strongest tower of delight, only stands at the caprice of the minutest event — the falling of a leaf, the hearing of a voice, or the receipt of one little bit of paper scratched over with a few small characters by a sharpened feather.

Pierre [1852], bk. IV

One trembles to think of that mysterious thing in the soul, which seems to acknowledge no human jurisdiction, but in spite of the individual's own innocent self, will still dream horrid dreams, and mutter unmentionable thoughts.

Ib.

I celebrate myself and sing myself,
And what I assume you shall assume.

Ib. Song of Myself, 1

I loafe and invite my soul. Ib.

Urge and urge and urge,
Always the procreant urge of the world.
Ib. 3

A kelson of the creation is love.
Ib. 5

A child said What is the grass? fetching it to me with full hands. Ib. 6

Or I guess it is the handkerchief of the Lord. Ib.

And now it seems to me the beautiful
uncut hair of graves. Ib.

Has anyone supposed it lucky to be born?

I hasten to inform him or her, it is just as lucky to die, and I know it.
Ib. 7

I am he that walks with the tender and growing night,

I call to the earth and sea half-held by the night.

Press close bare-bosom'd night — press close magnetic nourishing night!

Night of south winds! night of the large few stars!

Still nodding night! mad naked summer night. Ib. 21

Walt Whitman am I, a Kosmos, of mighty Manhattan the son,

Turbulent, fleshy and sensual, eating,
drinking and breeding;

¹ Why fear death? Death is only a beautiful adventure. — CHARLES FROHMAN [1860-1915], last words to a group of friends as the Lusitania
was sinking [May 7, 1915]

Why should I fear Death's call? Can there e'er be

In life more beautiful adventure than

To re-embark upon that unknown sea?

JAMES TERRY WHITE [1845-1920], Why Fear? st. 1

No sentimentalist — no stander above men and women, or apart from them;

No more modest than immodest.

Leaves of Grass. Song of Myself, 24

I dote on myself, there is that lot of me and all so luscious. Ib.

I hear the violoncello, ('tis the young man's heart's complaint). Ib. 26

I believe a leaf of grass is no less than the journey-work of the stars.
Ib. 31

I think I could turn and live with animals, they are so placid and self-contain'd,

I stand and look at them long and long.
They do not sweat and whine about their condition,

They do not lie awake in the dark and weep for their sins,

They do not make me sick discussing their duty to God,

Not one is dissatisfied, not one is demented with the mania of owning things,

Not one kneels to another, nor to his kind that lived thousands of years ago,

Not one is respectable or unhappy over the whole earth. Ib. 32

Behold! I do not give lectures or a little charity,

When I give I give myself.¹ Ib. 40

I have said that the soul is not more than the body,

And I have said that the body is not more than the soul,

And nothing, not God, is greater to one than one's self is. Ib. 48

In the faces of men and women I see God. Ib.

Do I contradict myself?

Very well then I contradict myself,
(I am large, I contain multitudes.)
Ib. 51

¹ See Emerson, p. 607b, and Lowell, p. 692b.

I sound my barbaric yawp over the roofs of the world.

Leaves of Grass. Song of Myself, 52

I bequeathe myself to the dirt, to grow
from the grass I love;

If you want me again, look for me
under your boot-soles. Ib.

A woman waits for me, she contains all,
nothing is lacking.

Ib. A Woman Waits For Me

If anything is sacred the human body is sacred.

Ib. I Sing the Body Electric, 8

I hear it was charged against me that I sought to destroy institutions,

But really I am neither for nor against institutions.

Ib. I Hear It Was Charged Against Me

When I peruse the conquer'd fame of heroes and the victories of mighty generals, I do not envy the generals.

Ib. When I Peruse the Conquer'd Fame

Afoot and light-hearted I take to the open road,

Healthy, free, the world before me,
The long brown path before me, leading wherever I choose.

Ib. Song of the Open Road, 1

Henceforth I ask not good-fortune, I myself am good-fortune. Ib.

The earth, that is sufficient,
I do not want the constellations any nearer,

I know they are very well where they
are,

I know they suffice for those who belong to them. Ib.

A great city is that which has the greatest men and women.

Ib. Song of the Broad-Axe, 4

Youth, large, lusty, loving — Youth, full of grace, force, fascination,

Do you know that Old Age may come after you, with equal grace, force, fascination?

Leaves of Grass. Youth, Day, Old Age and Night

Come, my tan-faced children, Follow well in order, get your weapons ready;

Have you your pistols? have you your sharp-edged axes?

Ib. Pioneers! O Pioneers! 1

Through the battle, through defeat, moving yet and never stopping,
Pioneers! O pioneers! Ib. 13

Out of the cradle endlessly rocking, Out of the mocking-bird's throat, the musical shuttle,

Out of the Ninth-month midnight.

Ib. Out of the Cradle Endlessly Rocking

Whereto answering, the sea,
Delaying not, hurrying not,
Whisper'd me through the night, and very plainly before daybreak, Lisp'd to me the low and delicious word death. Ib.

Aboard, at a ship's helm,
A young steersman, steering with care.
Ib. Aboard, at a Ship's Helm

But O the ship, the immortal ship! O ship aboard the ship!
O ship of the body — ship of the soul
— voyaging, voyaging, voyaging.
Ib.

Silent and amazed, even when a little boy,

I remember I heard the preacher every Sunday put God in his statements, As contending against some being or influence. Ib. A Child's Amaze

Give me the splendid silent sun, with all his beams full-dazzling!

Ib. Give Me the Splendid Silent Sun, 1

Word over all, beautiful as the sky!
Beautiful that war and all its deeds of carnage must in time be utterly lost,

That the hands of the sisters Death and Night incessantly softly wash again, and ever again, this soil'd
world;

For my enemy is dead, a man divine as myself is dead.

Leaves of Grass. Reconciliation

When lilacs last in the dooryard
bloom'd,

And the great star early droop'd in the western sky in the night,

I mourn'd — and yet shall mourn with ever-returning spring.

Ib. When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloom'd, 1

O sane and sacred death. Ib. 7

Come lovely and soothing death,¹ Undulate round the world, serenely arriving, arriving,

In the day, in the night, to all, to each,
Sooner or later, delicate death.

Ib. 14

Prais'd be the fathomless universe,
For life and joy, and for objects and knowledge curious,
And for love, sweet love — But praise!
praise! praise!

For the sure-enwinding arms of coolenfolding death. Ib.

O Captain! my Captain! our fearful trip is done!

The ship has weather'd every rack, the prize we sought is won,

The port is near, the bells I hear, the people all exulting.

Ib. O Captain! My Captain! 1

Exult O shores, and ring O bells!

But I with mournful tread,

Walk the deck my Captain lies,

Fallen cold and dead. Ib. 3

This dust was once the man, Gentle, plain, just and resolute, under whose cautious hand,

Against the foulest crime in history
known in any land or age,

Was saved the Union of these States.

Ib. This Dust Was Once the Man

The whole theory of the universe is directed unerringly to one single individual — namely to You.

Leaves of Grass. By Blue Ontario's Shore, 15

Liberty is to be subverted whatever occurs.

Ib. To a Foil'd European Revolu-tionaire, 1

What do you suppose will satisfy the soul, except to walk free and own no superior?

Ib. Laws for Creations, 3

Not till the sun excludes you do I exclude you.

Ib. To a Common Prostitute

O we can wait no longer,
We too take ship O soul, Joyous we too launch out on trackless seas,
Fearless for unknown shores.

Ib. Passage to India, 8

Passage, immediate passage! the blood burns in my veins!

Away, O soul! hoist instantly the anchor!

Cut the hawsers — haul out — shake out every sail!

Have we not stood here like trees in the ground long enough?

Have we not grovel'd here long enough, eating and drinking like mere brutes? Ib. 9

Darest thou now O soul,
Walk out with me toward the unknown region

Where neither ground is for the feet nor any path to follow?

Ib. Darest Thou Now O Soul

To me every hour of the light and dark is a miracle,

Every cubic inch of space is a miracle.
Ib. Miracles, 2

Today a rude brief recitative,
Of ships sailing the seas, each with its special flag or ship-signal.

Ib. Song for All Seas, All Ships, 1

Of sea captains young or old, and the mates — and of all intrepid sailors . . .

Pick'd sparingly, without noise, by thee,
 old Ocean — chosen by thee, Thou Sea, that pickest and cullest the race, in time, and unitest nations!
 Suckled by thee, old husky nurse — embodying thee!
 Indomitable, untamed as thee.

Leaves of Grass. Song for All Seas, All Ships, 1

Our life is closed — our life begins,
 The long, long anchorage we leave,
 The ship is clear at last — she leaps!
 She swiftly courses from the shore,
 Joy! shipmate — joy.

Ib. Joy, Shipmate, Joy!

Camerado, this is no book,
 Who touches this touches a man.

Ib. So Long!

The world, the race, the soul — in space and time the universes, All bound as is befitting each — all surely going somewhere.

Ib. Going Somewhere

Political democracy, as it exists and practically works in America, with all its threatening evils, supplies a training school for making first-class men. It is life's gymnasium, not of good only, but of all.

Democratic Vistas [1871]

It is native personality, and that alone, that endows a man to stand before presidents or generals, or in any distinguish'd collection, with aplomb
 — and not culture, or any knowledge or intellect whatever.

Ib.

I never see that man [Lincoln] without feeling that he is one to become personally attach'd to, for his combination of purest, heartiest tenderness, and native western form of manliness.

Specimen Days [1882]. The Inauguration [March 4, 1865]

He leaves for America's history and biography, so far, not only its most dramatic reminiscence — he leaves, in my opinion, the greatest, best, most characteristic, artistic, moral personality.

*Ib. Death of President Lincoln
 [April 16, 1865]*

The real war will never get in the books.

Ib. The Real War

After you have exhausted what there is in business, politics, conviviality, and so on — have found that none of these finally satisfy, or permanently wear — what remains? Nature remains.

Specimen Days. New Themes Entered Upon

Hast Thou, pellucid, in Thy azure depths, medicine for case like mine?
Ib. The Sky [October 20, 1876]

You must not know too much, or be too precise or scientific about birds and trees and flowers and watercraft; a certain free margin, and even vagueness — perhaps ignorance, credulity — helps your enjoyment of these things.

Ib. Birds [May 14, 1881]

To have great poets, there must be great audiences, too.

Notes Left Over. Ventures on an Old Theme

No really great song can ever attain full purport till long after the death of its singer — till it has accrued and incorporated the many passions, many joys and sorrows, it has itself aroused.

November Boughs [1888]. The Bible as Poetry

No one will ever get at my verses who insists upon viewing them as a literary performance.

A Backward Glance O'er Travel'd Roads [1888]

Concluding with two items for the imaginative genius of the West, when it worthily rises — First, what Herder taught to the young Goethe, that really great poetry is always (like the Homeric or Biblical canticles) the result of a national spirit, and not the privilege of a polish'd and select few; Second, that the strongest and sweetest songs yet remain to be sung.

Ib.

There is no week nor day nor hour, when tyranny may not enter upon this country, if the people lose their roughness and spirit of defiance — Tyranny may always enter — there is no charm, no bar against it — the only bar against it is a large resolute breed of men.
